MORNING:

Lecture 1: Understanding the Principles of Ancient Egyptian Religious Art.

This will explore and explain the magical and religious concepts that underpinned the art representations seen on the walls of temples and tombs.

Lecture 2: Religious Ritual at Abydos: Re-visiting the Temple of Sethos I at Abydos.

This will demonstrate how the Egyptian temple was designed and functioned as a ritual unit. It will explain how Rosalie David's new book about the Temple of Sethos I at Abydos has provided exciting opportunities to revise and update her initial study undertaken some 45 years ago.

AFTERNOON:

Lecture 3: Ancient Egyptian Medicine: Theory and Practice.

This will consider how available sources of evidence enable us to reconstruct a partial understanding of disease and medical treatment in ancient Egypt.

Lecture 4: Egyptian Mummies and Modern Science. This will explore how modern multidisciplinary techniques are contributing to our understanding of life and disease in ancient Egyptian society, and will show how such studies provide a fascinating historical context for some current disease patterns.
