

Ain't Life Suite?

Get the Royal Treatment

By Sasha Gonzales

What do the late Michael Jackson, John Legend, George Bush and Margaret Thatcher have in common? They have all stayed at the Hilton Hawaiian Village's Mahele and Ali'i Suites, located on the 14th and 15th floors, respectively, of the Ali'i Tower.

In Hawaiian, the word "ali'i" means royalty, and in these two luxurious parlor suites, expect nothing less than royal treatment.

Both Presidential Suites received a makeover last year to reflect a more contemporary vibe. The first thing you'll notice when you pass the entry foyer are the stately dining and living areas, with its elegant furnishings in a rich palette of purples and greens, and a bar zone, perfect for entertaining. The 500-square-foot wraparound balcony, overlooking Waikiki Beach, is the ideal spot for breakfast or evening cocktails,

You can't mention luxury without talking about breathtaking views, and the Ali'i and Mahele Suites have arguably the most spectacular ones in Waikiki. Imagine waking up to views of Diamond Head, the gorgeous Pacific and Fort DeRussy Park every morning.

Each 1,400-1,800-square-foot suite has two bedrooms, which are attached to either side of the living room. At the end of a long day, calm your nerves in the freestanding soaking tub before retiring to your plush king-sized bed.

The exclusivity does not stop there. Ali'i Tower guests have access to certain amenities that guests from other towers do not, including the Ali'i's own fitness center and pool. And because of the location of the Ali'i Tower, you can enjoy private entry into the building instead of through the tower's main lobby.

So even if you're not famous, you can still vacation like a VIP.
