Eagle Scout Program Guidelines

Marine Corps League Detachment Eagle Scout Recognition Program

The Department of Kansas has an Eagle Scout Program that recognizes the achievement of our Kansas youth in recognizing Scouting's highest award.

The following guidelines will assist any Detachment that wishes to participate in the exciting program of conferring a certificate to boys from the Boy Scout program who have achieved Scouting's highest award, EAGLE SCOUT.

Here's how it's done:

1. The Detachment votes to participate in the program at any regularly scheduled meeting. There is a cost factor in providing this program, so a vote is necessary from the membership.
2. Someone from the Detachment should be selected as Chairman of the Boy Scout Committee to bestow the Eagle Certificate; the member does not have to be active in the Boy Scout program, but rather interested in making certain that tomorrow's leaders are being recognized for their efforts. It is easier to get someone who is already affiliated with the Boy Scout program to undertake the job as Chairman.
3. When the Chairman is designated, contact the Department's Boy Scout Committee Chairman. The Chairman can provide guidance and assist the Detachment, and to maintain accurate records on the number of awards given by Detachments throughout the Department of Kansas.
4. A Quarterly Detachment report of those Scouts receiving the certificate should be presented to the Department Boy Scout Chairman.
5. The Department Boy Scout Chairman prepares a Detachment consolidated Quarterly Department Report for the Division Boy Scout Chairman & and copies Department Commandant.
6. A year ending Department consolidated final report is prepared by the Department Boy Scout Chairman for approval by the Department Commandant.
7. Once approved by the Department Commandant, the Department Boy Scout Chairman sends the year ending Department report to the MCL Division Chairman by the last week in June. The Division Chairman sends report to National Boy Scout Chairman.
8. The MCL National Boy Scout Chairman compiles the national data and presents the MCL totals at the annual National Convention in August. Whatever is reported to the Department Boy Scout Committee Chairman is the report given to National.

9. The only expense is that of the Eagle Scout Recognition Certificate (currently $2.00 each), MCL Red Presentation w/ Embossed Seal Folder (currently $2.00 each), and the time taken by the Detachment Marine(s) to make the presentation to the new Eagle Scout.
10. If your Detachment is interested in starting up a MCL Boy Scout Committee, contact the Department Scouting Chairman. The program is easy to start-up and maintain.
11. Please submit the Quarterly Scouting Reporting Form to the Department to let the Committee know that your Detachment is providing this service of honoring Eagle Scouts.
12. If you have questions, contact the Department of Kansas Scouting Chairman listed below:

Eagle Facts

Just over 2 million boys have reached Eagle in 100 years (15,000 a year, roughly). Currently, around 4 of every 100 boys that joins Scouts make Eagle--that's less than 1% of the male population.

An Eagle Scout is the embodiment of help health, faith, compliance and intellect, as required by the Scout Oath. The Scout Oath proudly declares, "On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country and to obey the Scout Law, to help other people at all times, and to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight." The title of Eagle Scout is a lifelong honor for the holder.

For life!:

The Marine Corps has a saying “Once a Marine always a Marine” that also stands true for Eagle Scouts “Once an Eagle Scout always an Eagle Scout”.

Making a difference: Some people go through life wondering if they made a difference. Eagle Scouts and Marines don't have that problem!

Earning the rank of Eagle Scout, earning the title Marine!

Becoming an Eagle Scout is something that is not just given to an Eagle Scout, it is earned just like in the Marine Corps the Eagle, Globe and Anchor is earned not just given to a Marine.

Presentation Speech Example

Congratulations upon achieving the rank of Eagle Scout. You are among a select few that have achieved this award, recognizing the characteristics of initiative, courage, resourcefulness and leadership.

You have demonstrated the highest qualities of leadership and moral character in your pursuit and attainment of the Eagle Rank. You can be proud of your start as a future leader.

United States Marines are highly disciplined individuals who abide by a code of ethics similar to those of the Boy Scouts: Honor, Courage and Commitment. They must be prepared at all times to perform their duty to support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies.

As you progress through school, remember all the challenges met and merit badges earned toward receiving this prestigious award. Maintain the skills, values, and self-confidence instilled in you by the Boy Scouts, for these qualities will serve you well in your quest for greater service to your family and community.

Good luck in your future endeavors, and I wish you much success.

Presidents of the United States and the Boy Scouts of America

Every president of the United States has supported the work of the Boy Scouts of America since its founding in 1910, and each served as honorary president of the BSA during his term in office.

Barack H. Obama, 2009 –

President Barack Obama praised Scouting for its first 100 years of service during a video address to attendees at the 2010 National Scout Jamboree.

“...For a century, Scouts just like you have served your communities and your nation in ways both large and small. During World War II, Scouts played a vital role in supporting the war effort at home by running messages and selling war bonds....Today, Scouts across the country continue in the tradition of collecting food for those in need, improving our neighborhoods, and reaching out to those less fortunate....

Congratulations on your first hundred years. I’m sure the next hundred will be even better.”

George W. Bush, 2001-2009

President George W. Bush, a former Cub Scout, praised Scouting and its enduring values when he appeared to the nearly 40,000 Scouts, volunteers, and leaders at the 2005 National Scout Jamboree at Fort A. P. Hill, Virginia, in July 2005.

“Every day, Scouts are showing that the greatest strength of America lies in the hearts and souls of our citizens. Through your Good Turn for America initiative, Scouts have given more than 1.4 million hours of volunteer service this year alone . . . On behalf of a grateful nation, I thank the Boy Scouts for serving on the front line of America’s armies of compassion.”

William J. Clinton, 1993-2001

President Clinton, a former Cub Scout, greeted 36,000 Scouts and leaders at the 1997 National Scout Jamboree at Fort A. P. Hill, Virginia, and commended them for promoting the importance of service to others.

“For almost a century, the Boy Scouts of America have helped to make volunteer service an American ideal. With every act of kindness, you’ve strengthened our nation’s commitment to community and promoted a sense of civic responsibility.”

George H. W. Bush, 1989-1993

George H. W. Bush voiced strong support for Scouting and lauded the BSA for its fight against drug abuse. He appeared at the 1989 National Scout Jamboree at Fort A. P. Hill, Virginia, on August 7, 1989.

“The Boy Scouts of America has assumed a leadership role in confronting this problem [of drug abuse]. You are teaching self-protection strategies against drugs and other dangers. You have circulated these strategies in direct language in a very successful pamphlet called Drugs: A Deadly Game. And you have done something else—you are leading the youth of America by example.”

Ronald W. Reagan, 1981-1989

While serving as governor of the state, President Reagan became involved in Scouting with the Golden Empire Council in Sacramento, California. During his eight years in that office, he chaired Project SOAR (Save Our American Resources), served as membership roundup chairman, participated in annual Report to the Governor ceremonies, and served on the council's advisory board. For his service to youth, he was awarded the Silver Beaver Award. As a member of the Los Angeles Area Council, he served as Scoutorama chairman, as a speaker for the council recognition dinner, and as a sustaining member.

"I applaud your many efforts and programs encouraging character development and leadership among American youth. By sponsoring many useful physical, mental, and social activities designed to promote self-responsibility, the Scouts strengthen the cornerstone of individual freedom in our nation. These programs develop the youngster's confidence in his ability to deal with nature, society, and a challenging world."

James E. Carter Jr., 1977-1981

President Carter was involved in Scouting as a troop committee chairman, Explorer Advisor, and Scoutmaster. In support of the president's appeal for an energy conservation program, the Boy Scouts of America held a Scouting Environment Day on April 23, 1977, and participated in other programs that contributed toward achieving national energy conservation goals.

"As a former volunteer Scout leader . . . I am greatly impressed by the role of your fine program in our national life. It is a constructive initiative on the part of young Americans to explore career interests, and to become better prepared for a more satisfying and rewarding future."

Gerald R. Ford, 1974-1977

Gerald Ford was the first Eagle Scout to become vice president and later president. He began his Scouting career on December 17, 1924, when he became a member of Troop 15, which was sponsored by the Trinity M.E. Church in Grand Rapids, Michigan. He was recognized with the Distinguished Eagle Scout Award by the Grand Valley Council at Grand Rapids, Michigan, in May 1970 for his service to the nation and community. While president, he received the Scouter of the Year Award on December 2, 1974, from the National Capitol Area Council in Washington, D.C.

"One of the proudest moments of my life came in the court of honor when I was awarded the Eagle Scout badge. I still have that badge. It is a treasured possession. I am the first Eagle Scout vice president. The three great principles which Scouting provides—self-discipline, teamwork, and moral and patriotic values—are the basic building blocks of leadership. I applaud the Scouting program for continuing to emphasize them. I am confident that your ability to bring ideals, values, and leadership training to millions of our young people will help to bring about a new era—a time in which not only our republic will progress in peace and freedom, but a time in which the entire world shall be secure, and all its people free."

Richard M. Nixon, 1969-1974

As vice president, Richard Nixon spoke at the national jamborees held at Irvine Ranch in California in 1953 and at Pennsylvania's Valley Forge State Park in 1957. Then as president in 1971, Nixon hosted the first National Explorer Presidents' Congress on the White House lawn.

"I welcome your determination to seek out new members in our great and growing cities, as well as throughout rural America. For through Scouting, many of these young citizens can more fully develop their potential for public service, and become effective leaders in their communities and in our nation."

"I strongly believe that Scouting offers an exceptional opportunity to learn about good citizenship by being a good citizen, and I am glad to hear that we can count on you to carry on the very important work . . . in encouraging America's boys to make themselves into the men our country needs."

Lyndon B. Johnson, 1963-1969

President Johnson was an active Scout leader with the Capitol Area Council in Austin, Texas, serving on its exploring committee, and was a member of the National Capital Area Council from 1959 to 1963. In 1963 he helped organize Post 1200 in Washington, D.C., which was chartered by the House of Representatives for page boys working in the U.S. Congress.

"I welcome this opportunity to express my pride and deep sense of gratitude for the outstanding example and enviable reputation for human understanding and fair play, which have, throughout the productive life of your organization, been hallmarks of Scouting everywhere. Your conduct, both individually and in your group activities, has been worthy of admiration by all the young citizens of our land. Today, as we face the challenges of an increasingly complex and frequently disturbing world, America needs an alert, responsible, and energetic youth to provide her with a vital resource in a hopefully happier and fuller future for all. As I applaud your past, I also urge you to rededicate yourselves to the ideals of the Scout Oath, and to reaffirm your obligations to your God and to your country. In so doing, you will contribute to the strengthening of America's heritage and thereby to the realization of our common goals in the Great Society."

John F. Kennedy, 1961-1963

The first Scout to become president was John F. Kennedy, a member of Troop 2 in Bronxville, New York, from 1929 to 1931 and a leader in the Boston Council.

"For more than 50 years, Scouting has played an important part in the lives of the Boy Scouts of this nation. It has helped to mold character, to form friendships, to provide a worthwhile outlet for the natural energies of growing boys, and to train these boys to become good citizens of the future."

"In a very real sense, the principles learned and practiced as Boy Scouts add to the strength of America and her ideals."

Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1953-1961

President Eisenhower became a member of the National Executive Board of the Boy Scouts of America in 1948, but had been a staunch supporter of Scouting ever since his son was a Scout.

"The Boy Scout movement merits the unstinted support of every American who wants to make his country and his world a better place in which to live. Its emphasis on community service and tolerance and world friendship promotes a speedier attainment of the enduring peace among men for which we all strive. By developing among its members both a spirit of sturdiness, self-reliance, and a realization of the need for cooperative effort in every major enterprise, the movement is a prime force in preparing tomorrow's men for their duty to themselves, their country, and their world. Here in the United States, the Boy Scouts of America have accomplished much in its years of service. But today, more than ever before, we need expansion of its membership and influence."

Harry S. Truman, 1945-1953

President Truman gave strong support to the Boy Scouts of America at every opportunity. He traveled to Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, in June 1950 to open the Second National Scout Jamboree.

"The Boy Scouts of America, since it was founded in 1910, has contributed greatly to the character training of our youth. What a greater nation this would be if the principles of Scouting could be woven more closely into our daily lives. If we can impress upon our youth principles of friendliness and mutual respect, we shall go a long way toward establishing a better understanding among the nations of the world. The Boy Scouts of America is making a vital contribution to the character-building of our boys and young men. Let us work together to make the program of the Boy Scouts available to every American boy."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, 1933-1945

President Roosevelt was the first to enter the White House with a record as an active Scout leader. He was president of the Greater New York Council of the Boy Scouts of America. In 1934, hundreds of thousands of Scouts assembled to hear President Roosevelt's broadcast appealing for help for the needy. They responded by collecting nearly two million articles of clothing, household furnishings, and other items for disadvantaged families. When FDR died in 1945, he had a 24-year record of service in Scouting.

"As one who has been interested in Scouting over many years, it has been most heartening to have so many evidences of the practical values of Scout training. We must remember that next to active military service itself, there is no higher opportunity for serving our country than helping youth to carry on in their efforts to make themselves physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight, and prepared to help their country to the full in time of war, as well as in time of peace. We must make sure that those volunteer agencies, which are supplementing the church, the home, and the school by providing programs that will help equip the present generation to cope with life problems in the difficult days ahead, are maintained to their maximum capacity and effectiveness."

Herbert C. Hoover, 1929-1933

President Hoover launched a forward movement and development program for the Boy Scouts of America at a dinner commemorating Scouting's 20th anniversary.

"The first test of democracy is that each individual shall have the opportunity to take that position of leadership in the community to which his character, his ability, and his ambition entitle him; . . . the progress of our country is thus directly related to the training in leadership we can give the youth of the nation. In meeting the vital need that when the oncoming generation takes over our national affairs it shall be a generation bulwarked with character, the Boy Scout movement plays a most useful part.

"The Boy Scout movement has opened for him the portals to adventure and constructive joy, by reviving the lore of the frontier and the campfire; by establishing contacts with the birds and sometimes with the bees; by matching his patience to the deliberate character of fish; by efficient operations of the swimming hole; and by peeps into the thousand mysteries of the streams, the trees, and the stars."

John Calvin Coolidge Jr., 1923-1929

President Coolidge's two sons were Scouts, and he had many opportunities to see the Scouting program at work. He participated in the 16th Annual Meeting of the National Council in Washington, D.C., in 1926, by presenting the first Silver Buffalo Awards for distinguished service to boyhood.

"The more I have studied this movement, its inception, purposes, organization, and principles, the more I have been impressed. Not only is it based on the fundamental rules of right thinking and acting, but it seems to embrace in its code almost every virtue needed in the personal and social life of mankind. It is a wonderful instrument for good. If every boy in the United States could be placed under the wholesome influences of the Scout program, and should live up to the Scout Oath and rules, we would hear fewer pessimistic words as to the future of our nation."

Warren G. Harding, 1921-1923

"Harding Awards" authorized by President Harding went to 5,058 Scout troops in 1923 for increasing their membership.

"I am with the Scout movement heart and soul. It is an organization teaching the spirit of service and honor, which we must always have in our citizenship. It is a school of democracy, because in it, standing is won only by taking the equal opportunity given all individuals to show their own merit, capacity, and worth. I wish every boy in our America could have the advantage and the honor of being in the Boy Scout organization."

Thomas Woodrow Wilson, 1913-1921

On June 15, 1916, President Wilson signed a bill, passed with unanimous consent in both houses of Congress, granting federal incorporation to the Boy Scouts of America.

"The Boy Scouts have not only demonstrated their worth to the nation, but have also materially contributed to a deeper appreciation by the American people of the higher conception of patriotism and good citizenship. Every nation depends for its future upon the proper training and development of its youth. The American boy must have the best training and discipline our great democracy can provide if America is to maintain her ideals, her standards, and her influence in the world. Anything that is done to increase the effectiveness of the Boy Scouts of America will be a genuine contribution to the welfare of the nation."

William Howard Taft, 1909-1913

In 1910, President Taft agreed to be honorary president of the Boy Scouts of America to "thus sustain a similar relation to the movement as does King George V to a similar movement in England." This precedent has been upheld by each of his successors. The first annual meeting of the organization was held in the White House on February 14, 1911, at the invitation of President Taft.

"I am very glad to give my sympathy and support to such a movement as this. Anything that directs the boy's spirit in the right channel for usefulness and for the making of manly men should be encouraged."

Theodore D. Roosevelt, 1901-1909

Although Theodore Roosevelt was no longer president of the United States when the Boy Scouts of America was founded in 1910, he was an ardent booster of the organization. He was a troop committeeman of Troop 39 in Oyster Bay, New York, and first council commissioner of Nassau County Council. As a former president, he was elected honorary vice president of the Boy Scouts of America. Roosevelt was the first and only man designated as Chief Scout Citizen.

For many years after his death in 1919, several thousand Scouts and leaders in the New York area made annual pilgrimages to his grave in Oyster Bay.

"More and more I have grown to believe in the Boy Scout movement. I regard it as one of the movements most full of promise for the future here in America. The Boy Scout movement is distinctly an asset to our country for the development of efficiency, virility, and good citizenship. It is essential that its leaders be men of strong, wholesome character; of unmistakable devotion to our country, its customs and ideals, as well as in soul and by law citizens thereof, whose wholehearted loyalty is given to this nation, and to this nation alone."
