

PROVIDENCE DIARY

Help us Document the Impact of Covid-19 on the Lives of Our Providence Community!

Providence Diary is a photo project to visually chronicle the effect of the Covid-19 pandemic throughout the 25 neighborhoods of Providence. Its goal is to create a collective portrait of our city through the eyes of its citizens as we confront the effects of this pandemic.

Photos taken on phones are ubiquitous in our culture and are the simplest and most direct medium for self-expression. Through community outreach we are collecting photographs taken from March through June by the widest range of individuals (ages, genders, ethnicities) living in our diverse neighborhoods. This collective portrait will both help in our processing of the pandemic now, and serve as documentation for future generations to understand the range of stories and emotions experienced.

Providence Diary will initially be published as an e-book and accessible via the Providence Public Library's Covid-19 Archive. Future plans are for a printed version and exhibition as funding becomes available.

Please direct any questions to Lisa Limer or Jason Tranchida at providencediary@gmail.com

Submit photos to:
providencediary@gmail.com

Deadline: June 15, 2020

Send one photo or send 20, but please send them as large as possible and be sure to include your full name in your email.

Note: By submitting your photos you are giving consent to have them reproduced online and in print as part of the Providence Diary project.