Thank you to our WIC Week/Industry Appreciation Committee for a great WIC Week. You ladies knocked it out of the park! I also want to thank everyone who attended and/or volunteered for WIC Week. Great job to everyone!

Thank you, as well, to our WIC Week guests for taking time to learn more about us.

April 26th through 27th is our Midwest Regional Forum in Chicago, Illinois. The early bird registration deadline was March 31, but regular registration is still open if you would like to attend. We have put in a bid to host Forum 2021 in Sioux Falls, and have five minutes to present on our wonderful city while we are in Chicago – wish us luck!

APRIL SAFETY TOPIC: SPRING SAFETY TIPS

Spring brings April showers, May flowers and weather-related risks.

Spring is the season when cranes and earth movers suddenly dot the landscape like so many tulips and cherry blossoms. While a full workload is good for the bottom line, longer hours coupled with unpredictable conditions can lead to an increased risk of accidents on jobsites.

It’s prime time to cover these topics, among others, in your toolbox talks.

Spring PPE. Springtime can be wet, muddy and windy, making slips and falls more likely. If you can’t pause the job for bad weather, make sure workers wear waterproof boots with good traction. A hi-vis raincoat is also a good idea, especially in areas with vehicle traffic, as are gloves with a slip-proof grip. If workers are wearing a hood because it’s raining, remind them to turn their heads when they need peripheral vision. Anti-fog spray for safety glasses can help keep their field of vision clear.

Mud safety. Workers should wipe mud from their boots before mounting equipment. If the steps or rungs are muddy, they should wipe them, too. In muddy conditions, everyone should slow it down, even if it means getting less work done.

Excavator safety. Spring is earthmoving season. Remind operators to check the ground for stability before moving across it, since soft ground can cause an excavator to tip or even roll over. Also, prod them to wear seat belts. Refresh your whole crew on how to avoid backovers. Non-operators should stay visible, alert and out of the way.

Fall protection equipment. Spring winds and rains also making working at height more dangerous. Go over the key points of your fall protection policy as far as wearing fall protection PPE goes. Demonstrate how to properly fit a body harness and do a partner check (since some parts of the harness are not visible to the wearer). Go over safe anchor points for personal fall arrest systems.

Scaffold safety. OSHA has scaffold rules in place for good reason, but judging by citations, contractors often ignore them. Here’s one for the whole crew to remember: Anyone working 10 feet or higher above a lower level on a scaffold must generally be protected from falls by either a personal fall arrest system or guard rails, and workers using single-point and two-point adjustable suspended scaffolding must use both. Here’s another: Employees are not permitted to work on scaffolds in bad weather or high winds unless a competent person has determined that it is safe to do so person prior to worker entry. Melting snow, flooding and spring rains could certainly change the conditions. Remind workers not to enter a trench until it’s been inspected.

Our 2019 Influential Woman in Construction Award winner is Andrea Miller, of Journey Construction. Andrea holds a Bachelor and MBA from SDSU in Mechanical Engineering/IT/Project Management. She was also active in ROTC, as well as serving in the Army in active service to our country.

She has career experience in marketing, sales, engineering, organizational and team leadership from her time in the Army, and construction management with 3 construction companies. She is a graduate of leadership Sioux Falls, and serves on several board and committees of nonprofit organizations.

As a trailblazer in a male dominated field, Andrea worked on the construction of the Denny Sanford Premier Center, the largest project in the city’s history, an impressive feat for anyone. She has led by example in the Sioux Falls construction market and helped facilitate several educational tours of the vents center, encouraging all the girls in attendance to consider careers in construction.

Andrea has been with Journey Construction for 2 ½ years as a Project Manager in their Preconstruction Department and has become an integral member of Journey’s team. “She does an excellent job working with project owners and design teams in a collaborative environment to help get projects developed through the pre-construction and design phases. She brings a great amount of energy and positivity to all that she does, and her team members and clients appreciate that. She is a dedicated employee and shows a very high level of commitment to her projects. She has played an integral role in helping Journey improve and standardize our pre-construction processes.

She has shown great leadership in helping Journey implement new initiatives, including: pre-construction/design Pull-Plan sessions, Subcontractor Prequalifications, and Bid Package Front End Standardization. She is a very drive individual who continues to push herself in her personal and professional development. She was active in the Girls Breaker Day Event that was hosted at Journey Group’s office in 2018.”
