Welcome to the Dec 19 / Jan 20 issue of Surrey News

As we get ready for Christmas, we’re delighted to announce details of our conference on May 16th 2020, which will also be when we celebrate the Branch’s silver jubilee.

Since the branch was founded with 11 parents in 1995, many things have changed in the world of autism, and we will be looking at the past, present and future of autism support in Surrey and nationwide.

There are several opportunities for you to make your mark on how services are delivered in the future, including a consultation on home / school transport in Surrey, signing an open letter to the Government about the delayed new autism strategy and opportunities to contribute to academic research projects designed to increase our understanding of autism.

The Branch’s online support group and email forum “NASSB” is moving from Yahoo to a new platform, Groups.io, in the next couple of weeks. There may be a pause in activity and adding new members until the transfer is complete, so please bear with us during the changeover.

Wishing you a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year,

Sara Truman,
Chair (volunteer)

Branch Conference 2020: Autism – Past, Present and Future
The next NAS Surrey Branch conference is on Saturday 16th May 2020 at the University of Surrey in Guildford, from 10.00 a.m. to 4.00 p.m. Next year is the 25th anniversary of the Surrey Branch being formed, and to mark this, we will be looking at how understanding of autism has developed over the last 25 years and the latest research, approaches and issues around today. We will be thinking about the future too, for our individuals with autism and the wider autism world.

Our main speakers are Carol Povey, Director of the NAS Centre for Autism, and Ros Blackburn, an autistic adult. There will also be workshops on some of the current big issues in autism: mental health, Pathological Demand Avoidance, teenage girls with autism, managing difficult behaviours, employment, and adult social care.

If you book by 31st January 2020, you can secure your place at a discounted rate of £30 for parents, autistic people and family carers, and £60 for professionals (suggested donations). From 1st February 2020, it will be £35 for parents, autistic people and family carers, and £70 for professionals. To book go to: https://bit.ly/2KWdijQd
For more information email conference@mugsy.org or call 07423 435413.

Free SEN Advice Sessions
Do you need some 1:1 advice about your child’s EHCP, Annual Review or potential appeal to Tribunal? Have you been told by your child’s school that he or she doesn’t need an EHCP, but you feel differently? Are you unsure how to proceed?

The NAS Surrey Branch is hosting an SEN clinic run by Tanya Williams, founder of www.senadvice.com. She is an SEN advocate and SOSISEN volunteer, who worked for over 20 years as a litigation lawyer, and is also a mum to two young people with neurodiverse conditions. Through the NAS Surrey Branch, Tanya is offering free one-off 40 minute 1:1 sessions for parents/carers of autistic young people in Surrey to give you advice on next steps or possible ways forward.

The sessions will be on Friday, 7th Feb in Guildford and Sat 14th March in Leatherhead. Places must be booked and will be allocated on a first-come, first-served basis.

Please note that due to time constraints, Tanya is unable to provide detailed advice on individual EHCPs. She is also unable to assist anyone who already has legal aid or other solicitors already acting for them.

For a booking form please email events@nassurreybranch.org with “SEN Advice” in the subject line. You will also be sent a questionnaire to complete ahead of the session.

Indoor Climbing – Sunday February 23rd
We are hosting two, one-hour indoor climbing taster sessions for children on the spectrum and their siblings aged 7 – 17 on the afternoon of Sunday 23rd February. It will be at the climbing wall at Xcel Leisure Centre, Walton-on-Thames, and the sessions will be 2.00 – 3.00 p.m., and 3.00 – 4.00 p.m. We are subsidising the cost, and are asking for a suggested donation of £7.50 per child. To book, please email Emma Whitfield at emma@mugsy.org with ‘Climbing’ in the subject line and let us know how many places you’d like, which session time (or no preference), and the ages of the child / children. NB Parents remain responsible for their children throughout this event.
Suicide Prevention Full-Day Workshop in January
We will be hosting a one-day course on Saturday, 11th January, teaching the theory and practice of suicide intervention skills. As many families know, suicide is more common in autistic people than in the general population and is an issue which has very sadly impacted our autism community. We are therefore pleased to be able to host this course designed for anyone who is seeking a greater understanding of and confidence in the topic. The training will be tailored to the needs of families supporting autistic people of any age. The course will start at 9:15am and end at 4:30pm and will be held in Woking.

We are delighted that Fiona Aldred, Director of Operations at The National Centre for Suicide Prevention Training, who was the speaker at our afternoon workshop on this topic earlier in 2019, is able deliver this more in-depth course. Fiona has been working in the fields of Suicide Prevention and autistic spectrum conditions for the past 15 years, and has significant experience working to support positive outcomes for autistic people. She is also a parent of autistic children.

Places are limited, and MUST be booked in advance. The event is designed for parent / carers of autistic children or adults and they will have priority for places.

The actual cost of the course is over £100 per person, but we are asking for a minimum donation of £25 per head. Please contact us if the suggested donation is a problem.

For booking details, or if you have any queries, please email events@nassurreybranch.org with ‘Suicide Prevention’ in the subject line.

MEETING REPORTS

Autism and Puberty, Talk by Mark Brown

In October, we hosted a talk by Mark Brown, a Special Needs Advisor with a particular focus on sex education who runs Special Help 4 Special Needs. In an engaging talk, he covered topics such as consent, risk and vulnerability, physical and social development, relationships, sexual activity and social norms.

Mark encouraged parents and carers to be proactive by thinking about puberty early. His advice was to prepare ahead; gather information from publications and the internet, create social stories, source diagrams and provide relevant items, but adapt the material to the needs of the individual. He discussed how accessing pornography on the Internet gives a false picture of what healthy sexual relationships look like. To the autistic young person, the pornography they view is factual representation, so it is vital that the sex education includes a true picture of sex and relationships.

In the section on physical changes, Mark pointed to research showing that 33% of autistic children develop epilepsy during puberty. He advised parents to prepare in advance for the physical changes that come with puberty that can be upsetting for young autistic people. He recommended planning for girls’ menstruation with appropriate information and being ready with the right sanitary products. He advised discussing erections and wet dreams, masturbation and how to address the issues surrounding location, frequency, privacy and safety.

As parents or carers of any adolescent – with or without autism - know, puberty can lead to anger and anxiety because of hormonal changes, as well as increased social expectations and the worries that this may create. Mark pointed out that obsessional behaviours may increase as the adolescent retreats to avoid the demands of transitioning into adulthood. Gender identity and sexuality may also need to be explored at this time. However, recognising the issues, talking about them and developing strategies to support the young person will help to transition through this period.

For the women in the audience the section on ‘The Etiquette of the Urinal’ was as enlightening as it was entertaining. Where to stand, where to look, trousers up or down, whether to talk or not talk, avoiding physical contact. It underlined the need to give specific information about appropriate behaviours in social situations to the young autistic people we look after.

Mark discussed how young people on the Autistic Spectrum can be vulnerable because they lack social understanding, have less awareness of boundaries and poor recognition of social cues. They may not understand intent, or recognise the responses of another to their own actions. Reducing vulnerability relies on learning about relationships, how to say ‘no’, the difference between public and private and the difference between strangers and friends.

He went on to discuss ways to prevent or manage inappropriate behaviour, warning that people with autism have entered the criminal justice system for what may have been an innocent mistake. His message was that it is easier to modify behaviours in a child to help avoid them getting into difficult situations than it is to change adult behaviour.
Recommended Books – Autism & Puberty
Mark recommended the 'Talking Together About Growing Up', 'Talking Together About Contraception', 'Talking Together About Sex and Relationships', and Kate Reynolds' books, 'What's Happening to Tom?' and 'What's Happening to Ellie?'. He has also kindly allowed us to publish his presentation to members and the slides can be found at: www.nassurreybranch.org/resources.html

Autism & ADHD in Adults and Young People, Talk by Denise Thornton

Denise Thornton spoke to members of NAS Surrey Branch in Woking in November. She is a Chartered Psychologist (BPS) and Registered Educational Psychologist with a Postgraduate Diploma in Paediatric Neuropsychology and has worked with young people and adults with autism and ADHD for over 20 years. She said that traits of autism and ADHD can sometimes be confused and also often overlap. Many young people and adults with autism also have ADHD and are frequently misdiagnosed and unsupported due to a lack of understanding on how these conditions can co-occur.

Denise explained how autism and ADHD often present differently in boys and girls, and men and women. More boys are diagnosed with both autism and ADHD because schools are more likely to pick up on problems in ‘lively’ boys, while girls tend to try not to draw attention to themselves, so don’t stand out.

A diagnosis of autism usually takes place in a clinic not a school, and may be undertaken using different diagnostic criterial – either DSM V or ICD 10. Denise said that in the past it has been very difficult to get a diagnosis of both ADHD and autism, but that both conditions can include hyper- or hypo-reactivity to sensory input or unusual interests in sensory aspects of the environment.

Although she is not a fan of medication for ADHD, Denise said that it can have a benefit for some children, although it can take many weeks to get the dosage right. Denise assesses dosages by observing children timed tasks at school before and after medication to see if drugs have a positive effect.

Denise concluded by saying that many of the strategies used to support autistic children also work with children with ADHD, and vice versa.

Open Letter Asking Government to Publish New Autism Strategy
The next national autism strategy, which will set out the Government’s plans to improve services and support for children and adults, was due to be published by the end of this year, but has been delayed due to the General Election. The NAS believes that autistic people can’t afford to wait for the changes in politics before vital improvements are delivered, so is asking people to sign an open letter asking the party leaders to publish this strategy as soon as possible if they are elected.

The NAS estimates that as many as 327,000 people across the country struggle to do the things others take for granted, like getting ready in the mornings, getting out into the community or working. Children and adults can face waits of years to get their autism diagnosis. You can add your name to the thousands who have signed here.
INFORMATION FOR ADULTS AND YOUNG PEOPLE

New Support/Social Group for Autistic Adults in North Camp
The NAS professional service has started a new group for adults with autism on the Surrey/Hampshire border. It meets in North Camp once a month on a Monday evening.

The group is for adults of all ages who wish to discuss issues relating to autism, share experiences and meet other adults with similar experiences. To be eligible to attend the group, you need to live within Surrey or the North East Hampshire Clinical Commissioning Group area (which includes Aldershot, Fleet, Farnborough and Farnham).

The group is not a drop-in, so you need to have made contact with the NAS before attending, though you do not need to be referred to the group by someone else. For more information, email aspire.groups@nas.org.uk

Survey of Siblings of Autistic Adults
Sibs, the charity for brothers and sisters of disabled children and adults, is looking for adults with a sibling who has a learning or developmental disability to take part in a survey.

They want to hear about your experiences, wellbeing, your relationship with your sibling, as well as what your support needs are.

The study, a collaboration between Sibs and the University of Warwick, will help Sibs develop relevant support to improve outcomes and relationships between siblings where one has a learning or developmental disability.

To take part, you need to be 18 years of age or older, have a sibling with a learning or developmental disability and reside in the UK.

This is a great opportunity to have your needs and experiences heard by the only UK charity whose sole purpose is to support siblings of people with disabilities.

If you are interested in finding out more about the study, please follow this link to the survey: http://ow.ly/mCQU50x4Xbk.

If you have any questions about this study, you can contact Nikita Hayden via N.Hayden@Warwick.ac.uk

Research into Loneliness in Autistic Adults

Kana Umagami is a PhD student at the Centre for Research in Autism and Education (CRAE) at UCL Institute of Education, and is autistic. She is investigating loneliness in autistic adults and is recruiting participants to take part in an online survey on this topic.

The online survey takes approximately 20 minutes to complete, and is available here. She would be grateful for responses from anyone who is:

- Aged over 18 (with no upper age limitation)
- Living in the UK
- Able to express their own thoughts (regardless of the ways they communicate)
- Diagnosed or self-identified as autistic

Kana hopes her research will provide a better understanding of loneliness in autistic adults.

Separate from this, The Grange in Bookham is doing research into loneliness in adults with learning disabilities. They have set up an online survey for people with LDs to complete, with the help of their parents/carers if required. You can complete the survey here, or if anyone would like a hard copy of the survey, please email Eloise Appleby Eloise.Appleby@grangecentre.org.uk
