Catch Falling Leaves...For Luck!

"I don't really look forward to Halloween as much as November 1st. November 1st should be named Discount Candy Day."
—Anonymous

I love the autumn season, but not so much the month of October. Egads, what am I saying? When my family reads this column, I know I'll be on the receiving end of irate objections and righteous indignation for sure. That's because our two daughters and granddaughter were all born this month; plus, Robert and I were married in October. I read that those born in October live longer and have fewer incidents of cardiovascular disease. And, if they wear their opal birthstone, they will always be lucky in life. I tell the daughters and granddaughter that must be true as they couldn't get any luckier than having Robert and me as parents. My problem with October is Halloween/Trick or Treat. As a kid, Halloween was great fun and we dressed up as Indians, fat farmers, witches, and all manner of ghosts and goblins. Treats were plentiful; some homemade and delicious like popcorn balls and candy apples. Not once did we consider that the treats might contain needles or other dangerous items. Tricks were mostly innocent like soaping windows or throwing toilet paper into trees; although our parents would recount tipping outhouses and putting what they shouldn't have in bags on porches. We ran around after dark unescorted with nary a worry; that is not the case today.

What does makes me happy about October, other than family birthdays, is my wedding to Robert on a fall afternoon forty-two years ago. The leaves were falling around us as we said our vows on a hillside at my parents' farm. And that reminds me of an old autumn superstition. According to folklore, catching autumn leaves as they fall will bring good luck.

Every leaf caught means a lucky month lies ahead. My advice is head to the woods immediately. Hurry, scurry, scramble and catch bundles of those colorful suckers; then believe you will win at every gambling endeavor in which you indulge. I'm thinking about gluing leaves on my chunky round body before heading to bingo. Now, don't judge me. If leaves will bring good luck and break my losing streak, I'm going for it. If my local bingo has a costume contest, I could go as a tree. Can't you picture me with acorns in my hair and a fake bird attached to my arm—maybe a cuckoo bird?

Finally, to be honest, I admit that there are two other October activities that I enjoy. Those are sipping hot buttered rum cider and eating pumpkin pie while watching squirrels scamper up and down the chunky round tree outside my living room window. Hm-m-m. Maybe I better rethink dressing up as a tree. The thought of a squirrel scampering up my chunky round body does not amuse me. Until next month, may Lady Luck blow you kisses as you dance out the door with dollars. Win big.

MINI CASINOS APPROVED IN PA

According to local news agencies, state gaming officials have approved the first license for a mini casino in Pennsylvania. A vote is anticipated in the next several months to finalize plans for a proposed facility at Westmoreland Mall. The casino is expected to generate $152 million in annual economic impact for the county once the casino begins operation out of a former mall storefront. The casino will be on the ground floor with dining and entertainment options on the second level. The project is one of five mini casinos expected to operate in the state.

BIG NUMBERS AT BOSTON HARBOR

According to the Massachusetts Gaming Commission, the recently opened Encore Boston Harbor made more than $48.5 million from gaming in its first full month of operation. The report detailed that the Everett casino's total gross slot and table revenue was just over $65.3 million since its opening on June 23.

SPORTS STAR MAKES FIRST BET

According to the Omaha World Herald, Tim Dwight, two-time All-America selection for the Iowa Hawkeyes and a 10-year NFL veteran, placed the first bet at Ameristar Casino Hotel in Council Bluffs during the grand opening of the casino's sportsbook in August. Dwight bet $100 on the Chicago Bears winning the Super Bowl.

SOUTH DAKOTA MAY GET MORE GAMING

There are currently three proposals pending for new gaming facilities in South Dakota. The decision as to future plans rests with a planning commission in Sioux Falls. The issue has been put off several times during the past few months. Some citizens have voiced objections to the plans because of the possible sale of alcohol at the facilities.

MACAU REPORTS SLIGHT DECLINE

International casino watchers say that the island-city of Macau has registered a 3.5% decline in aggregated gross gaming revenues for a recent reporting month. There are currently more than 35 gaming facilities on Macau. Most had seen revenue up-ticks in recent years.

The Best of Bingo

Website Sified.com recently ran a list of what it dubbed “The Best Bingo Halls Around the World.” Top picks included Foxwoods Casino & Resort in Connecticut, Red Rock Casino in Las Vegas, National Stadium Bingo in Dublin, Ireland, Paradise Island Bingo in Liverpool, England, Beason Bingo in London, England, Oneida Indian Bingo in upstate New York, San Manuel Indian Bingo and Casino in California, and Star Bingo in Melbourne, Australia. Sified gave no criteria as to how the Bingo games were chosen, but seating capacity, prize money and game frequency appear to be significant factors in their selections.

Rummage Bingo

The City of Osage Beach, Missouri, hosted its 11th Annual Citywide Rummage Sale in September at homes throughout the city. Participants who wished to have their homes included were listed on a shoppers’ map for a $10 fee. Booths were also available to sellers at Osage Beach City Hall for $15. To encourage shoppers to visit multiple sales, the city created a Rummage Bingo game with Bingo cards that were stamped at the various sales. After shoppers had received 10 different stamps, filling the Bingo card, they returned it to City Hall where it was entered in a drawing for a range of prizes.

Duck Poop Bingo

This year’s Community Fair in Hardwick, Massachusetts, was held on the town common and featured a range of activities including a craft beer and wine garden; antique tractor and farm equipment exhibition; blacksmith, pottery and timber framing demonstrations; a lumberjack contest, a chicken barbecue, and other events. Part of the festivities were presentations by the Farmtastic Beasts 4-H Club that included animal exhibitions, wool spinning and needle felting demonstrations, and a unique event called Duck Poop Bingo. To play Duck Poop Bingo, players placed quarters on a Bingo-style grid with numbers that a duck would waddle across. Whoever’s number the duck pooped on won a prize.

For the past eleven years, the Odd Fellows have run Bingo every second Sunday of the month on behalf of charitable and community organizations. UP was formed several years ago to support Yolo County city governments’ efforts to build the new shelter. The current shelter

A Bingo Family

Hi Guy,

I am a HUGE Bingo fan, to a big degree because I come from a “Bingo family.” My grandmother played Bingo as far back as I can remember, and both my Mom and Dad would often go with her to play and would just as often go on their own.

As a treat, Gran used to sometimes take the grandkids (there were five of us total), the rule being that she would only take two of us at a time. Boy, I remember the battles that would start over whose turn it was to go. But Gran wised up quickly and started keeping a booklet in her bag with a chart that listed which kids’ turn it was. No more battles, but a lot of whining when it wasn’t your turn.

She was very good at making a trip to Bingo an event. Sometimes we would stop at the five & dime beforehand, where we were each handed 10 cents to splurge on whatever we wanted. Other times we would stop for ice cream or even a whole dinner after Bingo, depending on how lucky we’d been at the games.

Bingo was held in the church basement, so a trip upstairs for prayers before the games was mandatory. I assumed that Gran prayed that she would win, but church lady that she was, looking back I think she would have considered that greedy and sinful. Needless to say, I always prayed for a jackpot.

Trips to Bingo with my grandmother were great, but even better when my parents went as well. This happened maybe twice a year. In this case, usually all five kids were allowed to go and the outing consisted of the five & dime, church, Bingo, and dinner out. We actually dressed up for the occasion. It was pretty awesome.

It’s a real shame that Bingo is no longer the family event it was once upon a time. I still see couples, an occasional pair of siblings, and small groups of friends together, but rarely if ever do you see multi-generational gatherings with grandparents, parents and kids.

I think it is this way for two reasons—many kids don’t really enjoy games like Bingo since their lives have gotten so “digital;” and because some Bingo halls have actually banned kids from playing, saying it is gambling and could harm them.

I’m not writing to debate any of this. I just think it’s sad that even if I wanted to, I couldn’t invite my kids and grandkids to certain Bingos because it would be breaking the law. Plus, it would be too much work to get them to put down their smart phones long enough to play. — Randy C., Oregon

Hi Randy,

Thanks for sharing your reminiscence. It’s fun to recall the good ol’ days before rules and regs started spoiling everything.

But keep in mind...those were also the days before seatbelts, cigarette health warnings, lead-free gasoline and bicycle helmets.

In that spirit, I wouldn’t be too quick to criticize organizers that choose not to allow children in Bingo halls. They’re just doing their part in looking out for our kids. If you disagree, luckily for you there are many Bingo halls without age restrictions, and plenty of other multi-generational activities families can turn to and get their kids to put down those damn phones. — Guy

Dear Dream Catcher

Answering The Call

Dear Dream Catcher

In my dream I’m sitting in a large room with only a desk and a chair and a telephone placed on an empty desk. I’m confused because I seem to be in an office of some sort and I assume I’m supposed to be doing work, but of what kind? Suddenly the walls in the room turn from beige to bright yellow and instantly the phone on the desk begins to ring. I’m hesitant to answer the phone because I still don’t understand why I am in the office but curiosity gets the best of me and I answer the phone quickly. Just as I put the receiver to my ear I wake up. Darn it! What was that phone call about do you think? — Marsha P., Saint Paul, MN

Dear Marsha

I think we can both agree that the key element to your dream is the telephone, while the most energetic or emotional part of the dream would be the phenomenon of the wall changing colors: From a drab beige to a bright yellow. When phones do not ring in a dream there is an implication of loneliness. And certainly your dream reinforces this solitude as well. You are in an empty room, sitting alone, without a sense of purpose. But then the dream switches things up, which indicates that there is a part of your nature that is ready for an abrupt change of scene.

The color yellow is generally associated with positivity, optimism, clarity. Too, we think of sunshine as yellow. So just as your dream takes on these energetic qualities the phone rings. Telephones can symbolize many things, but within the context of your dream the phone can represent social engagement. Because the dream did not offer any sort of message or direct communication when you answered the call, this tells us that it was enough for the dream to have the phone ring. What was said isn’t so important, but the engagement is. This is a preparatory dream, alerting you to the need to step out, mingle and answer the call for friendship and camaraderie. — Dream Catcher

Dear Dream Catcher

Can you say something about knives? I keep dreaming about close-ups of knives that are cutting and slicing things. And the funny thing is that I hate knives. And razors, too. If any character is shaving in a movie, I can’t watch the scene, it’s worse than a horror movie. Anybody who uses a knife in a scene makes me highly anxious. Like even

Burn Pits and Other Airborne Hazards

Were you deployed in Desert Storm and Desert Shield to a location where there were airborne environmental contaminants, such as burn pit smoke, sand, dust and particles, and oil-well fire smoke? Do you suffer from any breathing problems that haven’t been diagnosed? Have you signed up for the Airborne Hazards and Open Burn Pit Registry?

That registry is to help the Department of Veterans Affairs (and you) be aware of health conditions that might be related to those burn pits and other airborne hazards.

As a first step, go online to the VA.gov website and search for Airborne Hazards and Open Burn Pit Registry. You’ll see the list of countries, such as Iraq and Afghanistan, where service personnel were deployed. If you served on or after Aug. 2, 1990 in any of the listed countries, or in Afghanistan or Djibouti on or after Sept. 11, 2001, you may be eligible.

If so, and if you sign up on the registry, you will get a free medical workup. So far, nearly 180,000 veterans have enrolled. Even if you have no physical symptoms, sign up anyway. If you’re already signed up with VA health care, ask your primary-care provider to schedule an evaluation or call the environmental health coordinator at the closest VA facility.

If you enroll in the registry and it says you’re not eligible, work to have it corrected, as some records might be missing or inaccurate. Request an eligibility review.

If you have symptoms that medical providers haven’t been able to diagnose, push for your in-person, multiple-day specialty exam at the War Related Illness and Injury Study Center in New Jersey. The VA recently opened the Airborne Hazards and Burn Pits Center of Excellence there to do research into these health issues.

if the character is just walking across a room holding a knife, it makes me anxious. The worst is when a person wants to show me their Swiss Army knife. I don't care if it has a stupid pair of tiny scissors built into it, I'm just not interested. Please help. — Connie K., Spokane, WA

Dear Connie

Hey Connie, why don't you share with our readers how you really feel about knives? Ha! I think I've mentioned before in this column that any sort of intense repulsion in a dream can often indicate a secret attraction towards the symbol. Meaning, if a dream works hard to illicit a strong reaction it's important to pay attention, and explore, what is being reacted against. Knives, razors, spears, swords—all of those tools (or weapons) share one thing in common, they divide things up. A knife comes out and suddenly one piece of meat becomes two, three or four separate pieces. So this might be the central message of your dream. Either there is a fear of an existing condition being altered irreparably, or there is a desire to bring clarity to an existing muddle. (The sharpness of knives can symbolize lucidity and sharp focus).

The fear you experience could be related to the fear of change. A knife represents the exact moment that proceeds a significant shift in one's life. So the question for you would be this: Am I afraid of what will follow a transformation? Or, am I longing for an existing condition to be addressed and altered irrevocably? Do you see my, um, point? — Dream Catcher

Horoscopes for October 2019

ARIES (MAR 21-APR 20): “When you’re young and in love.” That’s the central theme for you this October as a gathering of forces in your house of romance have you looking far and wide for a mate or reestablishing your amorous ties with your current partner. Let love rule! The full moon on the 14th is a great day for testing your luck on a risky project.
Lucky Days: 4 - 14
Lucky Numbers: 3 - 51

TAURUS (APR 21-MAY 21): Do you recall the person you were when you turned fourteen? I’m asking because right now the cosmos is asking you to relinquish old habits that you developed as a teenager. You no longer need those coping mechanisms or strategies—in fact, a brand new identity and skill set is waiting to be born this month. Celebrate the shock of the new!
Lucky Days: 1 - 5
Lucky Numbers: 43 - 56

GEMINI (MAY 22-JUN 21): September has a lot to teach you about the influence of information. But what happens when gossip gets the upper hand in your relationships? Choose your words wisely now, and always present the truthful side of a retelling (to prevent complicated entanglements). The full moon on the 14th finds you hatching a wonderful new approach to organizing your life.
Lucky Days: 28 - 29
Lucky Numbers: 33 - 48

CANCER (JUN 22-JUL 22): A shocking shift regarding cash flow doesn’t mean a problem is brewing. See the adjustment as an opportunity to tighten up your fiduciary strategies. The full moon on the 14th shines a light on some new vocational opportunities. But remember you can’t just sit back and expect a golden egg to fall into your lap. The secret is networking, so get out there with the flock.

Lucky Days: 23 - 30
Lucky Numbers: 22 - 39

LEO (JUL 23-AUG 23): Do you remember that country western song Looking For Love In All The Wrong Places? Has that tune felt like your theme song lately? The full moon on the 14th shines light on your beliefs about romance. Hard truths must be faced. If you’re settling for less, well, that’s what you’ll attract. Do the math. This might mean going it alone for a spell.
Lucky Days: 6 - 9
Lucky Numbers: 15 - 39
VIRGO (AUG 24-SEP 23): Time to think differently about your efforts at self-improvement. Some things you can’t control. Complications arise behind the scenes, with peers that you can’t track or manage in your usual way. Allow your intuition and imagination to act as a guide; hints, brainstorm and dreams—usually late at night—will show you the way.
Lucky Days: 6 - 9
Lucky Numbers: 4 - 18

LIBRA (SEP 24-OCT 23): You might feel jammed between two distinctly different bookends right now. Your desire for harmony feels at odds with your impulse to express courage, to go after what you want in a direct way. But remember: sometimes you have to ruffle some feathers to get what you want and this is one of those disruptive moments in life.
Lucky Days: 21 - 27
Lucky Numbers: 14 - 54

SCORPIO (OCT 24-NOV 22): In ancient times sailors took big risks by sailing straight out into the ocean, with the possibility that their ship might fall right over the earth’s “edge.” October is that sort of month. You’re moving forward without knowing where you’re headed. Remember, faith is different from belief. Reach deep inside of yourself to forge a link with your unshakeable faith. You’re bound to win!

Lucky Days: 5 - 7
Lucky Numbers: 3 - 15

SAGITTARIUS (NOV 23-DEC 21): Your intuitive powers are red hot this month, especially around the full moon on the 14th when a critical revelation occurs on the job front. Don’t let the shock of disruption waylay your spirit. Let your ESP guide you through the rough spots. There’s a good chance you can flip a part-time hobby into a full time vocation!
Lucky Days: 24 - 29
Lucky Numbers: 43 - 58

CAPRICORN (DEC 22-JAN 20): Mars, the energy planet is hanging out with Venus, the planet of love, in your house of friendship. Don’t be surprised if a casual acquaintance takes a quick turn and heads down the road to romance! This is also a swell time to network and self-promote. People are responding more and more to your commonsensical style, the world needs more soberness right now.
Lucky Days: 18 - 29
Lucky Numbers: 2 - 34

AQUARIUS (JAN 21-FEB 19): Don’t be pressured into making a commitment you’re not ready to make. Keep in mind that not making a decision is also a way of making a decision. Devise a plan that allows you plenty of time for downtime. Allow your appreciation of the futuristic and freaky to inspire your creativity. Assume your mantle as the zodiac’s most potent visionary.
Lucky Days: 6 - 9
Lucky Numbers: 6 - 34

PISCES (FEB 20-MAR 20): Emerson knew human nature pretty well when he wrote: “People are to be taken in very small doses.” More importantly he knew himself through and through. Can you say the same for yourself? There are times, like this October, when your porous nature requires a protracted break. The world will get along fine without your smarts and kindness. October is all about ‘you’ time—however and wherever you want it.

Is it Time to Turn Pro, Player Asks?

Dear Aunt Bingo:

Is there any hard and fast rule on how many books of Bingo sheets are safe to play, and the best way to play them?

I'm medium-new to Bingo and up to now have almost always only played one book per evening. As I've played, I've begun to admire those players who are managing three, four, five and even six books in a session. I've seen that different players have different techniques:

- Some sweep from the top down each column using their dauber as a guide;
- Some go down the first column

then up the next in a snake pattern;

- Some use both hands and wave across the sheets like a magician doing a trick;
- And I'm sure there are other techniques as well that I haven't noticed yet.

When I first began playing Bingo, I played just one book (9 cards per page) except for one time when I got bold and decided that I'd have better luck with more cards and purchased two books (18 cards per page).

BIG mistake! I had a terrible time keeping up and got very anxious and broke out in a sweat! I'm sure I missed numbers and probably lost a jackpot.

After that experience I went back to one book, which has been perfectly fine. It has been a few months now, I'm playing quicker and better now, I've figured out how to use the monitor to keep pace, and now I want to try more books again.

From what I've said in this email, do you think I'm ready or am I pushing my luck? Is there anything about playing that it sounds like I'm missing or any advice you have for someone like me who is trying to play more cards? Thank you. — Evie E., Florida

Dear Evie:

From what you've written it certainly sounds like you are ready to play more books, but only you can know that for sure.

Your experience of playing too many books too soon is a common one: Folks new to Bingo see advanced players daubing away at rows of Bingo cards covering half the table and can't help but want to emulate them. They forget that these "pros" have been playing for years, likely decades, and long ago learned how to keep track of dozens of cards at a time. And it takes time.

One safe way to play more cards is through a handheld electronic device, available at many Bingo halls. Your cards are loaded into it and the machine tracks and marks them for you while you watch.

Handhelds can be fun and give you a lot more control of your game but create a very different feel to the whole Bingo-playing experience when compared with paper Bingo and daubing.

Your best bet now, in my opinion, is to bite the bullet, take the plunge, and take another stab at playing multiple books. You'll know within minutes if it's still too much for you. But I'm betting my favorite glitter dauber you'll be fine. — Aunt Bingo

WOULD YA' BELIEVE?

...It was poet, philosopher and satirist Horace, who lived in the first century B.C., who made the following sage observation: “He who postpones the hour of living is like the rustic who waits for the river to run out before he crosses.”

...Legislators in Vermont once found it necessary to outlaw whistling while underwater.

...If someone were to ask you to name the sunniest spot on Earth, you might be tempted to answer “the Sahara Desert” or some other such exotic place. You would be wrong, though; that distinction belongs to a town right here in America. Out of the possible 4,456 daylight hours each year, the sun shines for an average of 4,050 in Yuma, Arizona. That means that there’s cloud cover or rain for only about 10 percent of the time there.

...You might be surprised to learn that, according to those who study such things, Alaskans eat twice as much ice cream per capita than the rest of the nation.

...Those who have the time to study such things claim that the most difficult small object to flush down a toilet is a ping-pong ball.

Dealer Tips

I receive many questions from blackjack players; some involve interactions with blackjack dealers. Here are a few of them that you might find interesting and educational.

Should you tip a blackjack dealer, and if so, how much?

There isn't any rule that says you must tip a blackjack dealer, just like there are no rules that say you must tip a waiter or taxi driver. However, let's be realistic—we all know that many hard-working folks who work in the service industry have a low base salary and that they depend upon tips from customers to make ends meet. When I go to a restaurant, whether I tip my server and how much depends upon the service I get. It should be the same for blackjack dealers.

Unfortunately, I've run into some surly blackjack dealers over my 40-year playing career. You know the type...gruff, disagreeable, irritable, grumpy, unhelpful, never smiling, and making you feel uncomfortable when you play. My tip for them is nada. I also tell them point blank that they ought to find another job because they are not very good at the job they are doing (if they ask why, then I tell them specifically what they are doing wrong and how they should be doing their job). If a dealer is extremely obnoxious (I've actually had one call me an asshole for not leaving a tip), then I will seek out the pit boss and tell him about the discourteous dealer. On the other hand, if a dealer has been friendly, courteous, and helpful, I will leave a tip. How much? Because I play with an advantage, I know how much my theoretical hourly profit is and I usually tip no more than 25% of this. (I also wait until the count is in my favor before making a bet for the dealer.) If you are a basic strategy player and you want to tip a friendly dealer, my recommendation is to tip a few dollars if you are a $5 or $10 bettor, and tip $5 if you are a $25 bettor. (See next question.)

Does it make a difference how you tip the dealer? I'm asking because sometimes I see players make a tip for the dealer on their hand while others just leave some chips for the dealer after they are done playing.

I think it's important that you let the dealer know early in your session that if they are friendly and helpful that you will be tipping them. Therefore, if they are friendly from the get go, I'd make a bet for them on your hand (now they know that if they continue the behavior you expect, they will probably be rewarded with more tips). However, I don't recommend that you place the chip(s) you want to bet for the dealer on the outside of your betting spot (most players do this). Instead, you should place the chip(s) you want to bet for the dealer on top of your chips and inside the betting circle. The reason is if you place the chip(s) outside of the betting circle, you have no control over them. If the hand wins, the dealer will keep the chip(s) you bet for them plus the corresponding winning chips. If you place the chip(s) on top of your chips inside the betting circle, you still own them, meaning the dealer only gets to keep the winning chip(s) or whatever you choose to give to them. Usually, I let the chip(s) that I bet for the dealer ride on the next hand. If I win a few hands in a row, it gives the perception that I'm a big tipper. In addition, by placing the chip(s) you bet for the dealer on top of your wagered-chip(s), the additional amount will count toward your rating.

"The dealer made a dealing mistake, which caused me to lose. Her supervisor wouldn't correct the mistake. I felt cheated and I'll never play at that casino again."

Normally, if a dealer makes an error in dealing the cards or in a payoff, they are supposed to bring it to the attention of their supervisor. The floor supervisor has the responsibility to correct the mistake. In most cases, the supervisor will give the benefit to the players because they want to maintain them as customers. However, if you believe that the supervisor hasn't corrected the mistake to your satisfaction, you should tell the supervisor that you would like to speak to the pit (or shift) boss. I would plead your case at this level, including asking the pit or shift supervisors to review the tapes of the table so they can see the mistake made by the dealer.

Poker Talk

Ill-advised Bluff Ends Badly at WSOP

By Chad Holloway

An unusual hand took place with just five players left in June’s Millionaire Maker no-limit hold ‘em event at the World Series of Poker in Las Vegas. The $1,500-buy-in tournament attracted 8,809 entrants. Each of the finalists was guaranteed at least $350,758 in prize money, but all five had their eyes firmly fixed on the a first-place prize worth more than $1.3 million.

In Level 41, blinds were at 800,000-1.6 million with an ante of 1 million, Kazuki Ikeuchi, who had a massive chip lead, raised to 3.5 million from under the gun with Kc 8s. Josh Thibodaux sat second in chips with the other three players toiling on short stacks.

In tournament poker, when the chips are distributed so unevenly, it’s common for the chip leaders to stay out of each other’s way. The reason for this involves the Independent Chip Model (ICM), a mathematical model that allows you to convert chips stacks into real-money value. While you can’t cash out chips in a tournament, ICM gives you an accurate idea of how much money your chips are worth at any point in time.

When you have a lot of chips relative to the rest of the field, you’re obviously in a good spot. But by clashing with other big stacks, you risk going broke and losing out on prize money, which is why players will often big-stack collisions. It’s sort of an unwritten, unspoken rule.

That said, players sitting on big stacks sometimes ignore this “rule” and battle it out, which is what happened in the Millionaire Maker.

Thibodaux called from the button, both blinds folded, and the flop fell Kd 10d Kh.

Ikeuchi bet 3.3 million, Thibodaux called, and the 10h paired the board on the turn. Ikeuchi checked, and Thibodaux bet 5.2 million. Ikeuchi check-raised to 10.4 million, and Thibodaux moved all in for 29.3 million. Ikeuchi snap-called.

Thibodaux was caught bluffing and was drawing dead to Ikeuchi’s full boat. The meaningless 2c was run out on the river, and Thibodaux hit the rail in fifth place.

Such moves are often referred to as “punts,” or “punting.” In poker parlance, punting is defined as losing all your chips in short order by making one or more foolhardy moves. In this hand, you could say that Thibodaux punted by choosing to bluff into the chip leader when there were three other short stacks at the table.

Had he not mixed it up with Ikeuchi, Thibodaux still would have been sitting pretty compared with trio of players below him. Even if he’d played tight and outlasted just one of the other players, Thibodaux would have laddered up $113,617 in real money. If he outlasted two other players, it would have been worth an additional $268,259. If he made it it all the way to heads-up play, Thibodaux would lock up $830,783 and still be alive for the top prize.

Given that he sat second in chips by a decent margin, Thibodaux had a good chance to make it to the heads-up stage. Instead, he busted and saw $480,025 in prize money - the difference between second place and fifth place - go up in flames.
