Lake County Prepares for Elections

By Kitty Mayo Even though the presidential election is still over a year away, the constant news reports on candidates makes for a long election season.

Meanwhile, Lake County is making preparations for upcoming elections by updating electronic ballot counters using grant money from the state. Moving to the DS200 optical scanner, the system reads marked paper ballots and tallies the results.

According to Linda Libal, Lake County Auditor/Treasurer, election judges will be trained in the newer technology. The county is holding off for the time being on using electronic poll books, with some polling places still without internet access, and the law still requiring a printed signature from voters.

Change to Presidential Primaries. In previous years Minnesota held a caucus process to determine presidential nominees for each party, however, that was changed by state legislation in 2016. On March 3, 2020 voters will go to the polls to determine each major party's Presidential nominee by a straight vote.

According to the website for the Office of the Minnesota Secretary of State, voters will be required to declare the party they will be voting for by checking one of four party boxes when they sign the roster.

Voters must select a party to receive a ballot for that party, or they will not be allowed to vote in the presidential nomination primary. While the choice of a party ballot is considered private data, it will be recorded and given to the chair of each major political party.

Precinct caucuses will still be held at the local and state level to conduct other party business, but not to determine presidential nominees.

Farewell Party for Library Director Steve Harsin

Grand Marais Public Library is hosting a community farewell party for Library Director Steve Harsin, who is resigning to accept a regional-level position in southeastern Minnesota. The party will be held in the Grand Marais library at noon on Tuesday, November 12, which is also Harsin's last work day.

Harsin accepted his position with the library in 2014 and has lived up to his reputation as a change agent. When the Arrowhead Library System awarded the library a Legacy Amendment grant to commission a sculpture, Harsin ensured the project moved forward quickly by supporting the Art Committee and managing the grant. Tom Christiansen's Puzzle Tree sculpture has become a library landmark. Harsin's experience as a collection manager has earned the library compliments for its collection, which is sought after by libraries throughout the state.

Harsin's work with Arrowhead Library System (ALS) goes back to 1991, before library automation had taken hold. Imagine what it would be like to wait an entire year to receive your shiny new library card! One of Harsin's most important contributions was finding a way to streamline the ALS centralized borrower registration process. Within a year, he had dramatically improved the process, achieving staff buy-in to reduce the turnaround time to one week. While working for the Iron Range Research Center, Harsin designed and executed a genealogy database website that was so desirable Ancestry.com paid to use it. For Cook Public Library, Harsin executed a radical weeding project that ultimately tripled circulation of library materials.

Harsin began his career in academic and special libraries in 1982 and will need to draw on all of it for his next adventure as Southeastern Libraries Cooperating's (SELCO) first ever Outreach Librarian. In this role, Harsin will amplify his impact on intellectual freedom and information access by providing guidance to the 36 libraries in their system.

Everyone is welcome to say farewell at the party and sign a group card from the community.
