A recovering alcoholic embarks on an epic train ride home to visit his young Autistic son he has not seen since birth. His life plays out before us as he shares his memories and tells his stories with a stranger sitting across from him on the train. The man shares his deepest emotional scars as he tells the stranger his story. As the story begins, the man shares with the stranger how he felt insignificant to his alcoholic father and how he felt ignored and not loved by him. We learn his mom is very religious and how she tried to show strength and wisdom to lead this man onto a path different from the one his own father followed. He loves the little boy so much but he just can't escape the throes of his addiction. Finally, after some coaxing from his mom and their local priest, the man decides to check himself into rehab. DIRECTORS NOTE

Love, Hope, Faith, Repentance, and Redemption.

This story is inspired by true events in my life. I wrote this script over 14 years ago in New York City. In New York, I was trying to make my way as an aspiring Actor. The wheels quickly fell off and I slipped deep into addiction and alcoholism.

One day on a New York City Subway train, hungover and feeling guilty about leaving my Autistic son behind while his Mom raised him alone, I decided to start writing my own story. A story about the guilt that I felt and how much I loved my son and just wanted to be with him, but couldn't because my addiction had a stranglehold on me.

I have been in and out of jail for failure to pay child support, a DUI and failure to show for my DUI hearing. I thought my life was truly coming to an end. I was indeed homeless and lost all hope. When I had nowhere else to turn and when I thought it was all going to end, my mom intervened and saved my life. She worked with the priest at my church to help me get into a faith-based rehab and the rebirth began.

I put down the script as I went through my own real-life recovery and raised my Autistic son by myself without his Mom, so the tables had turned. Once my son became more self-sufficient, I picked it up again and finished the story.

The purpose of this story is to bring hope and inspiration to those who suffer from addiction and to raise awareness and celebrate those with disabilities and those who care for children and adults with disabilities.

PRODUCTION NOTES

Everything happens for a reason.

In my past I spent time in front of the camera, but never realized the tremendous and challenging undertaking producing and directing a film would be.

I did a lot of research and a lot of reaching out and asking questions about how to make a film. From the beginning I knew this was going to be a faith-based film, so my first goal was to find a Cast and a Crew that believed in the things I believed in and most importantly believed in this story. I wanted them to genuinely feel the emotions this story makes me feel, I didn't want them to only be involved with the film, I wanted them to be spiritually invested in the film.

The lead that you see in the film, Adam Ratcliffe, wasn't my first choice. As a matter-of-fact he wasn't even the 2nd or 3rd. But when my 1st choice of the lead didn't work out a couple of other options were presented to me by my Line Producer who also has a lot of connections in the industry. He kept bringing up Adam's name. I saw Adam's work and noticed he was cast as a police officer more times than I was comfortable with and was doubting he would be a good choice. Then I heard his story. Adam too is a recovering alcoholic with a wife and son, and it was then that I knew he was my guy.

Added to the mix of amazing talent in this film are Brian O'Halloran who plays the lead role (Dante) in Kevin Smith's breakout film "Clerks" as well as "Dogma", "Chasing Amy", "Clerks 2", "Mallrats", and a slew of others. We also have Brian Anthony Wilson playing the role of "Ambrose", the stranger on the train. Brian is most known for playing Detective Vernon Holley in HBO's Award-Winning smash hit Series "The Wire".

We auditioned for the rest of the Cast, found some hidden gems, had a table read and were ready for principal photography.

The first day of shooting began on Oct. 27, 2017. I was so excited because my life was going to play out right in front of me and I knew how emotional I was going to be. The biggest reward though, from the gate was that I had chosen the right actors, because they shared in my emotion and showed their own too.

There was a point during filming when someone in the Crew jokingly suggested we change the name of the film to "Cry". It was that kind of shoot. It was touching and emotional rollercoaster ride that not a single person on that set will ever forget. At one point one of our Actors, Tony Devon, completely broke down because he was thinking about his own Dad and Mom and how much he missed them and loved them.

The production itself was extremely difficult at times but we soldiered on and didn't look back. Some of the scenes I never thought would see the light of day ended up being the most beautiful we shot during this journey.

We shot 80 pages of dialogue in 11 days in 7 different locations spanning 2 States and 5 different Cities. We had a weekend break to regroup in the middle of the shoot and then get back together for the home stretch.

We shot 2 days of pickup shots a few weeks after the shoot was complete on Nov. 14, 2017 and that's all we needed. We were finished with principal photography and it was time to move to post.

During the shoot the operator of the train where we shot the trains scenes let me know that he specializes in sound for film. I didn't forget that. I ended up hiring him to do the sound. I asked him if he knew a good colorist and he mentioned his best friend is a professional colorist. I already had an Editor, she is the same Editor that put together our amazing trailer, so that was a no-brainer. Wow, that was easy. Everything happens for a reason.

You know what, though, I never lost focus on what we were doing this film for. And that reason is for the Glory of God. The only reason I am alive today is because I let my Lord and Savior Jesus Christ take my life over and guide me to where I am today. He put me exactly where I needed to be at exactly the right time. I put all of my trust into Him and knew that He would lead me to my redemption.

So here we are today, you are reading my Production Notes 14 years after this idea was first conceived. Better late than never has never meant more than it does at this moment.

Everything happens for a reason.
