President's Message

By Ellen Dowling

Dear IAS Members:

And now it's almost March, that most Irish time of the year! Lots going on in the month (see the Calendar on p. 11), but most important is our ST. PATRICK'S DAY PARTY on March 15th! (Details can be found on p. 6.) Thanks again to the committee members for putting this all together (especially the amazing Kathy Wimmer!). And also special thanks to Tom Garrity (of The Garrity Group PR) for sponsoring the party's entertainment! With Ceili dancing, Irish step dancing, Irish songs, and lots of tasty Irish food (Irish stew, corned beef and cabbage, and Irish soda bread)—the party promises to be a full afternoon of good craic and malarkey! But be advised that seating is limited, and last year we sold out, so GET YOUR TICKETS NOW!

If you are planning to go to the party and can get there before noon, we need folks to help us decorate. Let me know if you can help.

I heard that Natasha Coffing put on a wonderful performance at our February meeting. It's really amazing how much talent can be found in our area. (When I tell folks in other places that there's an Irish club in Albuquerque, they are usually very surprised—New Mexico has an Irish club???) We also have an Irish Consul General nearby (in Austin, TX) and Claire McCarthy (she's the CG) will come to visit with us at our April 10 meeting.

I'd like to send another special shout out to Caren Garcia, who submitted the wonderful article on Irish history for this newsletter. Any other members out there have any kind of writings about things Irish that you'd be willing to share with us? Stories, poems, reviews of movies or plays, historical accounts, description of your own adventures in Ireland—as long as it's something Irish, we'd love to read them. Contact me for word limits and such.

As of 2/20 we have 56 individual memberships, 3 students, and 44 (x 2) family memberships, for a total of 147 members. Good job to all of you the have renewed! Poet Paul Muldoon will Visit NM!

Paul Muldoon, the great Irish poet, will be making several public appearances in New Mexico this March. Muldoon is one of the most famous living English-language poets, yet his best work is rooted in a distinctly Irish (Gaelic) sensibility. On March 19th, at 6 PM, Paul Muldoon and his wife, novelist Jean Hanff Korelitz, will attend a book-signing at Bookworks in Albuquerque. On March 22nd, he will read his poetry at Albuquerque Chatter Sunday, 10:30 AM, and at Santa Fe Teatro Parguas, at 6 PM. On March 26th, at 6 PM, he will read and be interviewed as part of the Mary Power lecture series at the UNM Irish Studies program (see box on left).

Paul Muldoon was born in Portadown, County Armagh, Northern Ireland in 1951. His father was a farmer, his mother a school teacher. Muldoon's mentor and friend was the late Irish poet Seamus Heaney. An immigrant and now a US citizen, Paul Muldoon has taught at Princeton University for more than thirty years and served as Poetry Editor of the New Yorker magazine.

And there's more: On Saturday, March 7th, from 11 AM to 2 PM, IAS member (and fellow poet) Bill Nevins will provide an introduction to Paul Muldoon's poetry at Jules Poetry Playhouse in Placitas. To register for the class, click here.

The First Hundred Years

By IAS member Caren Garcia

The Republic of Ireland is celebrating a “Decade of Centenaries” surrounding the Irish War of Independence, 1919-21. The infamous Easter Uprising of 1916 was the culmination of 700 years of British rule, which resulted in the execution or imprisonment of many separatists, but sparked a movement that would ultimately lead to the formation of the Republic.

Before I return to the current celebrations, a quick review is in order. Following the conclusion of what we in America call World War I, on January 21, 1919, Irish nationalists declared the independence of the isle. A group of 27 men formed the first Dail Eireann (Irish Parliament) and the Sinn Fein party. They asked that the “free nations of the world” recognize the Republic. The spark that lit this fuse also resonated with countries around the world that were under the thumbs of colonial powers and led to a globe forever changed.

Cultural and economic independence was the goal, finally putting the Irish people first in the use of indigenous resources, to include food security for the populace. Unmoved, the Protestant North remained loyal to the British crown, laying the foundation for the Troubles to come.

The new Republic sought financial and political support from its far-flung expatriate population, especially those in the U.S., where organizations were formed to answer the call. Support also came in the form of arms and ammunition and led to the formation of the Irish Republican Army (IRA).

In December 1920, the British government enacted the Government of Ireland Act, which created the partition of northern and southern Ireland that remains to this day. Both entities were granted “Home Rule”—accepted in the north but rejected by the south in favor of moving forward with the call to independence.

With a bit of a push from U.S. political pressure and the continued resistance in southern Ireland, a truce was declared in the summer of 1921. The Anglo-Irish Treaty of 1921 created a provisional government, but this did not fully resolve the issues that lead to the revolt; rather, it created division within the nationalist movement. In 1922, civil war broke out.

A cease-fire was declared in December 1922, and the Irish Free State was formed. In 1923, the state was recognized by the League of Nations, precursor to the United Nations (UN). In 1925, the division of the isle, leaving Northern Ireland behind, was accepted.

Although acknowledged as an independent state by Britain in 1931, it was 30 years later, April 19, 1949, when the Republic became fully independent of the British Commonwealth of Nations and was finally free. This fact is especially relevant in the aftermath of Brexit, as the Republic remains an integral part of the European Union. Meanwhile, in the “Decade of Centenaries,” the current administration in Dublin had made plans to honor those who served and died in the Royal Irish Constabulary (RIC) prior to independence, opening old wounds for both their families and those of the IRA fighters. Opposition leaders held the administration of Leo Varadkar, of the Fine Gael party, responsible for the strained feelings, and the plans for this celebration were cancelled.

Members of the RIC were officers who defended British colonial rule and had often formerly served in the British military. They included the Dublin Metropolitan Police, the Irish Constabulary, and the despised “Black and Tans,” who were responsible for large numbers of deaths among the Irish rebels. (This is not to say there were no atrocities committed by the IRA; however, these men were considered traitors to the Republic, and as such, plans to honor them raise hackles for many citizens even today.)

Other commemorations of a sensitive nature that are still to come include Bloody Sunday, set for November 2020; the Easter Uprising, the election of the first Dail; and the partitioning of Ireland.

For many, the wounds are still too fresh, and nerves lie just below the surface; others wonder when it will be acceptable to honor all those of both sides who died in the conflict. To be honest, the American Civil War is much farther in the past and still holds landmines for politicians and others who seek to put it behind them.

[NOTE: Some of the details found in this article were derived from two pieces in the New York Times: an article by Ed O'Loughlin, Feb. 5, 2020; and an Op Ed piece by historian Christopher L. Pastore, Jan. 21, 2019.]

Flowers of the Forest (and a Bit of History)

(From Norita Callahan): Patrick "Pat" Joseph Vail, 76, passed away recently from complications of pneumonia. In 1973, Pat and his wife Ann (Co. Galway) were instrumental in the formation* of the Irish-American Society here in Albuquerque, with the help of mutual friends and acquaintances, many of whom were from Ireland. Ads were put into local newspapers, church bulletins, and the TV Roadrunner, and a potential membership list was formulated with the response.

Organizational meetings were held in various homes, ice cream parlors, restaurants and the Edelweiss German American Club. Board members were elected, a noted artist designed the IAS logo, Pat wrote a bi-monthly newsletter and in 1975, the bylaws were approved and the IAS became an official organization. Their first dance was held at the GAC.

The following paragraph is a quote from Pat Vail in an article from a 1990 Irish Times: "It can truly be said that the original goals of the club have been met. The preservation of Irish culture, the introduction of many who became close friends, the enjoyment of all who participated—these are the reasons the Society was founded, and they are the strength of our organization today."

Our deepest condolences to Pat's wife, Ann and other family members. May he rest in peace.

*(In the 1960s, there was a group of Irish friends who met occasionally and socialized. They called themselves the "Little Green People" and often gathered at the GAC. This was the base for what would become the IAS.)

Irish Dancer Going to National Competition!

[Note: Every year, the IAS donates funds to the various Irish step dancing schools to help dancers defray costs of attending competitions. Garnet Waldrop is one of those dancers.]

Garnet Waldrop has been Irish dancing since the age of three. Now 14, Garnet has attended and placed at Regional and National Championships since 2013. She has also competed at the All Irelands in Belfast, bringing home a medal for soft shoe. She currently dances for Belisama Irish dance Company out of Santa Fe under Adrienne Bellis and Celia Bassett in partnership with Michael Patrick Gallagher School of Irish Dance. An 8th grade honor student at Ask Academy in Rio Rancho, Garnet competes internationally in robotics and brought home and 11th place award from China over the summer. She will be competing in Craon, France in June. She enjoys classical guitar and runs her own charity, called Ray of Sunshine New Mexico. Recently, she gave a TED Talk at TEDxABQ Women's conference discussing how small actions have a huge impact. Her future goals include becoming a biomedical engineer with a focus in robotics and nanobot technology and to work for NASA as an astronaut.
