

To whom it may concern,

The Department of Educational and Counselling Psychology is proud to present the 3rd annual Summer Institute for School Psychology, which will be held May 31st and June 1st, 2018. The goal of this annual conference is to offer a high quality professional development experience for school psychologists across North America.

The two-day conference will include a series of workshops presented by renowned scholars from Canada and the United States, including Drs. Jonathan Weiss, Sam Goldstein, Jessica Toste, and Jeffrey Derevensky. This is an excellent opportunity to showcase the School and Applied Child Psychology Program, McGill University, and Montreal to attendees from across North America. We would like to ensure that attendees have the best possible learning, networking, social, and tourist experience.

More information can be found on our website: <http://www.mcgillschoolpsychinstitute.com>

After a very successful first two year, the 3rd edition of the Summer Institute for School Psychology will continue to provide excellence while growing its reputation and size. This year we are expecting 100-150 attendees. We hope to partner with you to provide them with the best possible experience while attending our conference and visiting in Montreal. To ensure the sustainability of such an event we will need your support.

We offer you the chance to participate in the continued success of the Summer Institute for School Psychology and to celebrate this unique event with us while ensuring unparalleled visibility to the university community and professionals in the fields of school psychology and education.

We thank you for considering our request and look forward to hearing from you soon.

We hope to see you there!

The goal of this Summer Institute is to provide attendees with a rich learning experience, to enable participants to network with their colleagues, and to promote the establishment of working relationships among professionals from across the continent. It is also a unique opportunity for students to get in touch with professionals and to gain valuable, practical knowledge about their chosen field outside of the classroom setting.

The Summer Institute for School Psychology will bring together over a hundred professionals, academics and students from the fields of school psychology and education. This conference will take place at McGill University's downtown campus at the end of May 2018.

Benefits:

We offer you the opportunity to participate in the success of this unique Canadian event. Below are some of the advantages that you can benefit from by becoming a sponsor:

- Visibility among more than 100 professionals, academics and students from across North America
- Visibility in the fields of school psychology and education
- Chance to contribute to the success of a unique event happening within the McGill community

By partnering with the 2018 Summer Institute, you will also be supporting the professional development of current and upcoming generations of dynamic and committed school psychologists while ensuring international visibility in the field of education.
