Fire Department entry level and promotional testing/interviewing is a demanding process which often leaves candidates separated by fractions of points. This two hour class will help you learn the best way to diminish pressure, anxiety, the fear of the unknown, and achieve your goal is through preparation and practice. Tactical Scenarios, Structured & Unstructured Interviews, and Assessment Centers will be reviewed.

Albe Bassett MBA, MS

Albe has 25 years in the fire service and has been a successful candidate in the entry and promotional process multiple times. He has been selected and participated as an evaluator in numerous entry and promotional processes in large and small departments. Albe has personally coached over 100 people for their interviews for firefighter to chief of the department and as the fire department's training chief he has designed and overseen the testing process. Albe earned a Master of Business Administration with a concentration in Strategic Leadership from the University of New Haven (CT) and a Master of Science in Industrial Organizational Psychology from Walden University.

Roy Gagne MA, EMT-P

Roy has over 23 years experience in Emergency Services including over 16 years in the fire service. As a Lieutenant he has coached and counseled others throughout entry level and/or promotional testing up through the rank of Deputy Chief, and has sat on entry level and promotional interview panels. This background along with his experience in organizational communication, leadership development, negotiations, interpersonal communications, teaching/education, and media and public relations will help him assist you in performing to your absolute best throughout your interview process. Roy has been a Paramedic for over 20 years and earned his Masters degree in Organizational Communication and Leadership from Marist College.
