

Resist with soul

- DEFIANCE: Unarmed Resistance During the Holocaust

During the Holocaust, Jews were forced to leave their homes, and separated from their families. They were tortured, enforced to participate in human experiments, and even massacred in the concentration camps. However, defenseless Jews still chose to resist even facing the brutal and heavily armed enemy. They never flinched although numerous Jews were sacrificed in the resistance. Deeply in their heart, there is a blowing shofar. Blowing shofar is their tradition, and it symbolized the spirit of unremitting, and full hope of future. Even though Nazis could kill Jews, they could never destroy the faith and soul of Jews. Jews believed as long as they insist on their belief and the resistance, they would escape from the concentration camp, and go back to their homeland.
