Deep Thoughts

By Jerry Silvestro

Hi Friends and Neighbors,

A friend of mine stopped in for lunch recently and said he had just come from the Dentist. I thought about that for a second and realized that I hadn't been to the Dentist for years. I subscribe to the same theory about Dentists as I do for just about every other motivation in my life. If I'm hungry, I eat. If I'm tired, I sleep. If I'm thirsty, I drink. And if my teeth hurt.....well, you get the picture.

Now, it's not like I don't trust the Dentist, it's that, um yeah, I guess I don't trust the Dentist. For one thing, what's up with that outfit that buttons up the side like something out of an old Star Trek episode? And why does he and his cohorts always leave the room when they X-ray you? They flip the switch and race out of the room, probably to a lead-lined concrete bunker.

When he came back, the Dentist would jab me in the gums sixty or seventy times until my mouth was full of blood and I had to spit in what appeared to be a miniature toilet. Then he'd show me what was supposed to be an X-ray of my mouth, knowing full well I couldn't distinguish an X-ray of my mouth from a postcard from Stonehenge, and he'd tell me I had a cavity and he was going to fill it. I would tell him that I hadn't noticed a so-called cavity, and that it was after all, my mouth.

Okay, so a cavity is a hole in your tooth, right? So, for the next twenty minutes or so why does he make it bigger?

I decided I could save money if I stopped going to the Dentist, got a sharp implement and jabbed myself in the gums a couple times a year. I figured I could ward off those phantom cavities by brushing after every meal. I mean, my parents told me that. My teachers said it. Heck, Bucky Beaver said it.

But then something strange happened. It seems that while I was wasting my time brushing, I should have been flossing. Ol' Bucky and Mister Tooth Decay never said one word about flossing. The Dental Community says we have to do it otherwise we'll get gum disease.

Pretty slick, isn't it? We can't tell when we have cavities, then how in hell are we supposed to know whether we have gum disease or not.

So, my tooth hurts. I go to the Dentist. He tells me I need a root canal. Hmm, sounds amazingly like cavities and gum disease. Okay, I play along.

After the procedure, I go to the front desk. The young lady informs me that I owe 1,214.00 dollars. I promptly take out cash and count out the money. She stares at me, aghast, and says that it's crazy that I walk around with that much money. I replied, "No, what's crazy is that you charge that much money for something that I have no evidence I really needed."

Stay well and God Bless!

Take the Trivia Challenge

Each month we'll give you a new trivia question. Bring or mail in your entry. The first 10 people to answer correctly will be in the drawing to win a dinner certificate worth $15.00. April's winner, Lynn Zagar, knew that the national bird of the US is the bald eagle; but the word bald comes from an old English word meaning white. She has received a dinner certificate worth $15.00.

Who created the modern Mothers' Day holiday?

- 1) Anna Jarvis
