A Note from Rick: No major changes in any of our markets to report this week. We had a big run of feeders on Tuesday and the market was soft, as it's been all summer. Dairy cattle were steady along with slaughter cattle. The calf market continues to bounce up and down, this week was much better than the last couple of weeks. I guess we're just kind of stuck in a rut with calves, feeders, and slaughter animals and I'm not sure what it's going to take to move these markets up. Cattle prices on the board of trade have rebounded somewhat after the big slide in prices a month ago, but there is just not a lot of excitement in this market. The Fall Frenzy on Thursday was a good little sale, I thought. We didn't have a big crowd but the market held steady with only about 50 head of horses. We are definitely gearing up for some big sales in October and things are falling into place nicely. Hope to see you at TLA!
