

Oil Field Accident Law in Texas

The United States continues to be dependant on oil and gas and Texas is one of the largest producers of such oil and gas. With increased production in west Texas and the Eagle Ford Shale, the oil field continues to be a dangerous environment to work in. Reasons for accidents include but are not limited to: employee fatigue, lack of training, improper safeguards, and OSHA violations. These accidents can be catastrophic.

You may be able to recover damages, a financial amount, from the person at fault of the accident. These damages include but are not limited to: past and future pain, suffering, medical bills, mental anguish, and lost wages.

Remember time is important because most injury cases expire or have a statute of limitations. This is a time frame when a lawsuit must be filed in court. In most cases, you have two years from the date of the injury or accident to file.
