The Donald Ross Course ~ Celebrating 100 Years!
French Lick & West Baden, IN

Lunch and Prizes Immediately Following Golf

"The Hill Course," as it was originally known, was designed by Donald James Ross in 1917. Just seven years later, in 1924, the course hosted the PGA Championship won by Walter Hagen. The course has hosted LPGA Championships and Senior PGA events in the years since.

Ross, an expert greens-keeper and club maker is credited with laying the groundwork for the American golf industry. His architectural firm, Donald J. Ross and Associates, designed and redesigned 400 courses throughout North America between the early 1900s and the late 1940s. Ross is one of the few golf course architects to be admitted into the World Golf Hall of Fame. As a testament to his architectural brilliance, Donald Ross course designs account for 11 of Golf Digest's 100 Greatest Courses in the United States. After a $5 million dollar restoration effort in 2005, the Hill Course was renamed The Donald Ross Course at French Lick Resort.
