Another break-away group headed by George Patton and Peter Eyman left in 1848 to organize a small congregation in Indiana known as the Church of God or New Dunkers.

So, there you have the Shakers and the Dunkers and the origin of their names is quite obvious.

At one time almost every country with a colonial empire sent their prisoners to colonies in other lands. Portugal sent most of its criminals to Ceuta in North Africa; Spain sent theirs to Hispaniola; and France to the infamous Devil's Island in French Guiana. Despite the objections of the colonists, England sent theirs to Maryland and other American colonies. The Revolutionary War put an end to British penal colonies in America, and they then began shipping them to Australia.

Thomas Nast (1840-1902), American cartoonist, is credited with having originated the symbols of the two major political parties - the elephant for the Republicans and the donkey for the Democrats. The elephant first appeared in an 1874 cartoon. As for the donkey, Nast used the old fable of the ass that dressed in a lion's skin and amused itself by frightening the other animals. Anyone care to guess Mr. Nast's politics? He also originated the tiger as a symbol for Tammany Hall, and the cartoons so ridiculed Tammany Hall that they were instrumental in bringing down Boss Tweed.

The Mississippi River played an important part in the history of Illinois and forms its entire western boundary. In 1832, Henry Schoolcraft looked for and discovered the source of the Mighty Mississippi - a little stream, 18 feet wide and less than a foot deep, at the northern end of Lake Itasca in Minnesota.
