Keep Your Granite Countertops in Shape

Despite the common misperception held by homeowners that granite countertops are difficult to maintain, they are actually quite simple to care for. In the past granite required a bit more care and maintenance, but with the new granite sealers that have come on the market in the last few years' countertops can be kept in shape by following a few simple guidelines.

Use a premium sealer

One of the easiest ways to protect your granite countertops is to seal them using a high quality sealer. Based on our experiences, we suggest that you use the A High Quality of sealers due to their effectiveness and reliability.

Sealing protects your countertops by making them less porous, which creates a unique anti-bacterial surface and makes them much easier to clean since dirt is less susceptible to getting caught in the pores. Sealers also repel stains, water and oil, all factors that can lead to your countertop looking poorly over time.

Granite deserves no special treatment

Although granite countertops are very hard and resistant to heat and scratching, it is still best to use hot pads when dealing with super hot pans just to be safe. Granular material can still get caught between the counter and pan, which can lead to scratching, so it's better to be safe than needing to repolish a surface. Furthermore, like a standard countertop, some people use cutting boards and avoid cutting directly into the counter, if you want, wipe up spills and avoid sliding any heavy cookware across the counter. don't let settle on top for days

Recommended cleaning methods

When wiping up spills, is important to ensure that the cleaners are mild and contain no abrasives; strong cleaning chemicals such as bleach and ammonia can seep into the pores and cause discoloration. We recommend bullguard sealing we will recommend cleaner for you, as it is a gentle cleaner that can easily be used to give your countertop a weekly cleansing. As for cleaning materials, a soft cloth or sponge will suffice.
