

COUNTER RESPONSE GROUP

COUNTER RESPONSE ACTIVE SHOOTER TRAINING

Two to Four Hours

Counter Response
Group

Training Options for the Active Shooter Threat
Training

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE: *National average time of law enforcement arriving onsite, at an active shooter incident is 12 MINUTES ...

CUSTOMIZED TRAINING

The advanced level training addresses mutual topical information contained in the awareness level. However, with extended information and analysis of individual attacks; including case studies (most recent mass shootings and mass shootings motivated by radicalized beliefs, emerging trends, progression of mass shootings and the mitigating factors. Other topical information included is violence prevention.

Within the first phase of this program, individuals are exposed to methods and action plans to assist participants to react with a survival mindset during a critical, violent incident; recognizing threats as well as preparation for the unknown factor, and maintain a mindset void from ignoring/denial of primal instincts of survival. Participants will gain knowledge of effective communication with management and personnel; differences in preparing an action plan to address an active shooter incident from other possible emergencies.

Our goal is for each participant to complete this training with a clearer understanding of the proper responsive actions to take combined with the tactics to survive an act of targeted violence (mass shooting)

Phase Two

During the final phase of our advanced training a direct focus is placed on the “last option,” bringing the fight to the attacker. We advise and instruct attendees how stage a room, office or building that will provide advantages and opportunities needed to subdue and eliminate an active threat, an individual shooter or multiple aggressors; Direct combative tactics against the aggressor.