From Your Florida District Directors Fred and Karen Kennedy (FL1-D, FL1-E2)

Greetings All!!!

I find myself fresh off yet another Region A Rally and this one didn't disappoint! The North Carolina District Rally was held in Brown's Summit, which is located in the northern, central area of the state, just north of Greensboro. We carpooled up and had a great time. Lots of beautiful scenery and very interesting sights. NC District Director, Libby Jennings, hosted a great event and we had a LOT of FUN playing many different games, some of which I had never seen! Helmet Bowling was a hoot and I don't know what to call the other one, where we sat 4 in a row blindfolded and had to dump a container of foam doughnuts over and behind your head, where the player behind you was waiting to catch as many as possible in another container, but smaller. It kept going, each time using an even smaller container and the team that had the most doughnuts in the last container won! It sounds deceptively easy, but it really isn't! It's just plain FUN. There were several high-quality vendors, hot dogs and lots of drawings. I won a whole bucket of chocolate covered almonds and Karen won a 50/25/25! Congratulations to Libby and her Team for putting on such a great rally!

We won't be home long though, as it's off to Mississippi to attend their District Rally. We are so looking forward to riding the relatively short distance to Biloxi (only about a 1 1/2-hour ride) and having FUN at the last of the Region A Rallies in 2024! We ALWAYS have a great time there and we expect the same this year! We'll report on all the activities soon!

At this moment, newly named Tropical Storm Helene has just formed and is potentially threatening the northern Gulf Coast of Florida somewhere between Apalachicola and Cedar Key, as if this area needed yet another severe storm. Folks on the West Coast from Key West and up, need to pay close attention, as storm surge will likely be very high, especially in Tampa Bay! Members from all areas within the “Cone of Uncertainty” should make preparations soon, as this storm will be upon us very soon. Our prayers are for all to be safe and have no damage from this event. Good luck to all that are in danger’s path.

We hope everybody took advantage of the discounted rate for the 3rd Rendezvous that will be held in Fort Smith, Arkansas. Karen and I have been talking about riding to Arkansas, but plans change and we’ve never been there, so we are really looking forward to going.

It’s not too early to make sure you register for the Shrimp-R-Us lunch on New Year’s Day. I was very impressed with both the amount and quality of the seafood they provided and their seafood alternative, chicken. We’d love to see everybody there!

One of the best things about attending so many different rallies, is seeing lots of new games and we get to bring them to our rally... I won’t say which ones, but there will be a few. Get your teams ready!

So, until we are together again,
Ride Safe... Ride Often... but most of all... Ride!!! (and have a Happy Halloween!!!)

NATIONAL FLUFFERNUTTER DAY
OCTOBER 8

National Fluffernutter Day, on October 8th, brings about a yummy and extraordinary combination. Some food holidays are stickier than others. And National Fluffernutter Day is a stick-to-your-ribs-chin-fingers-nose kind of day! Celebrate zealously, then take a bath.

In 1917, Archibald Query of Somerville, Massachusetts, invented a sweet marshmallow-like spread called Marshmallow Creme. Before that, in 1913 during World War I, Emma and Amory Curtis of Melrose, Massachusetts, invented Snowflake Marshmallow Creme. And then they published a recipe for a peanut butter and marshmallow creme sandwich, the earliest known example of a Fluffernutter. Query sold his recipe for Marshmallow Creme to Durkee-Mower, Inc. in 1920, who renamed it Marshmallow Fluff. Over 100 years later they continue to sell it under that name today.

Where did the term "Fluffernutter" come from? Well, the advertising agency for Durkee-Mower created it in 1960 in an attempt to effectively market the peanut butter and marshmallow sandwich.

Beyond the history of Fluffernutter, the culinary side of this remarkable combination of sweet and nutty interests us, too. By layering all the creamy goodness of marshmallow creme and peanut butter between toasted bread, some kitchen experts take perfection to the limits.

How about when pigs fly? Yes, bacon does compliment a fluffernutter. While the combination seems like a bit of a circus, it also leads us to another ingredient. Fluffernutter and bananas! Elvis would cry tears of joy. Lastly, replace the white toast for a pretzel bun and some heads might turn.

Greetings to all!

KNOW YOUR MACHINE

I encounter many riders in my travels which have many opinions and questions about riding a motorcycle. Most riders feel like if you can ride a two-wheel motorcycle you can ride any vehicle classified as a motorcycle. Technology has greatly outgrown rider ability and knowledge. Because vehicles classified as motorcycles are so diverse, you must be sure that you have the proper knowledge of the vehicle you are riding as to its features and capabilities.

Dirty Harry rightfully stated it: "You got to know your limitations." This has always been true for the rider. But now, more than ever, it is also true of your machine. In the past, the common limitations of a motorcycle were pretty simple: Ground clearance and the braking system were about all you had to know about your machine for safe operation.

Today's modern machines are offering much more technologically advanced systems such as: Selective Riding Modes (Road, Trip, Sport, & Rain), Traction Control, Active Cruise Control, Lane Warning Assist, and Side View Assist, just to name a few. If your new machine comes with any of the new technology you have to understand how it works. These systems were developed to try to help the rider stay out of trouble. The only defect these modern systems can't fix is: "the loose nut behind the wheel" (the rider). If you don't know how these systems work, you tend to not let them work. The systems were placed there to help you ride safely... let them.

Another situation I have encountered is when the two-wheel riders, that have "aged out", have decided to transition to a three-wheeled motorcycle so they can continue to ride. Legally, taking a transition course is not required. In Florida, if you are endorsed to ride a two-wheeled motorcycle you can ride a three-wheeled motorcycle. Three-wheeled motorcycles would include: The Traditional Trike-two wheels in the rear, The Reverse Trike-two wheels in the front, and A Sidecar Rig-off to the right side. Each of these vehicles has its own distinctive handling characteristics. Having ridden a two-wheeled motorcycle for many years does not give you the knowledge and experience you need to have to safely operate a three-wheeled motorcycle. There are classes you can take specifically for three-wheeled motorcycles to familiarize you with what you need to know about the safe operation of these vehicles. I strongly recommend you take one of these classes if you are going to make the move to three wheels.

Let me tell you a story which illustrates what I am talking about. There was a two-wheeled rider who had only ridden two-wheels for decades. He physically needed to transition to three-wheels. He bought a Can-am. The Can-am has traction control linked with the throttle. This means, if you enter a curve too fast and the machine senses that you are about to raise an inside wheel, the machine will let off on the throttle and brake the vehicle regardless of what the rider is doing. This rider was a trained two-wheel rider. That meant he was trained that is you enter a curve too fast on two-wheels, you first straighten the motorcycle so you can safely apply the brakes to slow down. So, on this unfortunate day the rider entered a curve too fast on his Can-am. He realized he was going too fast. He instinctively straightened the Can-am so he could apply the brakes, not allowing the Cam-am to take care of the situation. His hand was apparently still on the throttle in the on position. So, what did the Cam-am think at this point? The wheels were now straight, so there was no longer a threat of wheel lift. The Can-am reapplied the throttle. The machine went straight off the road into a barbed wire fence. The fence did stop the machine. Not the kind of stop I would prefer. The rider did sustain injuries from the barbed wire.

So, the conclusion to my article is to: "know your machine". Especially if you have purchased one to the newer models with better safety features.

Ride Safe!

You make EWMA FUN!

Well, it is that time of year... so, HAPPY SPOOKTACULAR!!! Speaking of which... A strange and weird lady moved into my house. I have no idea where she came from or how she even got in. One day she wasn't there and, WHAMO, there she was. Most of the time she manages to keep out of sight, but when I pass a mirror, I catch a glimpse of her. Whenever I check my appearance, she hogs the whole damn thing Obliterating my gorgeous face and body. How rude!! I scream at her, but she only screams back.

You'd think she would offer to share the bills, but NO. Sometimes I find a $5-dollar bill in a coat pocket or some loose change under a cushion, but that isn't enough. I think she is stealing from me. I withdrew $50 and a few days later it's all gone. I certainly can't spend money that fast. Not only that, food seems to disappear at an alarming rate. The good stuff, like ice cream, chips, candy bars, cake, pies. She must have a sweet tooth, but she better watch out, I saw her in the mirror and she is starting to pack on the pounds. I suspect she knows and she is messing with my scale to make me feel like I'm the one gaining weight. Oh yeah, get this: She alters my clothes, when I'm not home, she messes with my mail, magazines and newspaper making the print smaller, the sound on the TV so I can't hear it. Don't know how she does it, but the stairs are steeper, the vacuum heavier, all the knobs and handles harder to turn. You know, my bed seems higher? I seem to have trouble getting in and out of it. She is quite childish. When I put my groceries away, she super glues all the lids, making it impossible for me open them. Just when I thought she couldn't get any meaner... are you ready for this: When I went to get my driver's license photo she jumped in front of me JUST AS THE CAMERA CLICKED.

I sure hope she NEVER finds where you live.

You only live once. If you ride enough, once is all you need. Until Thanksgiving...

WHAT A GREAT RENDEZVOUS!

I did not return home from the 2024 Rendezvous in time to submit my article last month, but I still wanted to share what a great time I had during my trip to Wisconsin and at the Rendezvous.

Robert and I decided to take a few extra days to get to Wisconsin and made it a road trip. Robert's request, since we would be so close and all things considered, wanted to see the Mall of America's in Minneapolis MN. So we planned our road trip heading to Minnesota first then across Wisconsin to Green Bay. We traveled through several states that we had not been in before. And saw more corn being grown in so many states that I never knew grew corn. One of the good surprises on the way north was for Robert. While traveling the super highway on the edge of Missouri and Illinois we came across a sign for the town of Metropolis (the home of Superman). And since Robert is a big comic geek, I suggest that we stop and check it out. You would have thought that I put Robert in a candy store. We were only there for a couple of hours, but while there we saw at least 100 motorcycles (mostly Harley's) stop and take pictures in front of the 100 foot statue of Superman. I was impressed that almost every rider was properly dressed for riding and they were having a great weekend ride.

Our next port of call was Minneapolis and the Mall of America's. It was impressive and we (with the help of my scooter) visited all 4 levels. Most stores are not the type of stores that I shop in, but we did stop at the LEGO store and made a LEGO pencil. Robert was a kid again in a candy store. I was trying to get him to go on one of the rides that are set up in the middle of the Mall, but he chickened out and decided not to ride any of them. The “amusement” park in the center of the mall was also very impressive.

The next day we headed for Green Bay. Wisconsin is another state with so much corn growing. Checking into the hotel in Green Bay was like a homecoming. Getting to see so many friends was great. We had an extra day before the Rendezvous started so we decided to explore the area and check out the lighthouses. With my camera in tow, we were off.

The weather was not good, but we prevailed and I did get to see a few lighthouses and play with my camera. Robert was great getting me very close to the lighthouses. We also checked out the local towns and actually ran across a cheese store. We had been wondering where we could buy Wisconsin cheese since we had not seen any stores or locations advertised. It was a great store and I won't tell you how much I spent on cheese. Let's just say I had to try just about every flavor.

The first day of the Rendezvous was FUN with seeing everyone at check in and attending some presentation. The next day I spent visiting the vendors and attended a couple of forums with Eagle Wing's officers. Great Q&A sessions. The final day we visited a local green market just a block away from the convention center. I don't think I have ever seen such great produce and I would have bought a whole bunch of it if I had a way to get it back to Florida. It was gorgeous. I also took another spin through the vendor and watch my fellow Florida District team play the “baseball” games. The Rendezvous closed with a sit down dinner and ended with dancing to a really good band.

I was sad to see it end and I believe if you did not attend this year's Rendezvous – you missed a really good one. Now I am really looking forward to heading to Fort Smith, Arkansas for next year's Rendezvous.

Get ready, Robert, for another road trip!

Motorcycle Safety Training – AGAIN!

Realistically, I'll bet many of you think you have heard it all before.

STOP! Shake it off!
Complacency is dangerous!

Revisit, review, and retrain for safety.

Training Reduces Risk: Riders who have recently completed an on-bike motorcycle safety course are less likely to be involved in accidents. These courses teach essential skills in on-bike exercises like emergency braking and evasive maneuvers, which can be lifesaving. For maximum effectiveness, you really need to practice under the discerning eye of a seasoned expert like Dominick DeSiato and the like.

Now is the time to take advantage of the cooler weather. Plan now for an MSF course for yourself or your chapter soon. Check the Florida District web pages for scheduled training or work with me and/or Dominick DeSiato to host a training event.

Ride Safe.
