

199 Domestic Production Activities Deduction

Did you know?

The Section 199 Domestic Production Activities Deduction of the federal tax code provides for a very powerful deduction of up to 9% of taxable income that is applicable to a wide-range business, including those in the following industries.

- Aerospace & Defense
- Agriculture, Farming and Pest Management
- Alcoholic Beverage Industries: Distilleries, Wineries and Breweries
- Architecture, Engineering, and Construction
- Automotive and Automotive Parts and Diagnostics
- Beverages
- Biotechnology (Pharmaceuticals, Medical Devices, Diagnostic Equipment, Life Sciences and other Engineering)
- Computer Technology
- Consumer Products
- Electronics
- Energy (Oil & Gas, Artificial Lift Techniques, Refinement, and Fuel: Alternative Energy)
- Industrial Equipment
- Manufacturing
- Software

About BRAYN Consulting LLC:

BRAYN Consulting LLC is a knowledge firm that supports CPA firms and their clients in obtaining R&D, Production & Construction incentives. Headquartered in the greater Los Angeles, California area and additional office in Houston, Texas, BRAYN is comprised of technical experts with decades of Big 4 and national tax consulting firm experience in the area of R&D, production, construction, and energy incentives. BRAYN Consulting LLC is not a CPA firm or law firm.

IRS Circular 230 Disclosure - To ensure compliance with requirements imposed by the IRS, we inform you that any U.S. tax advice contained in this communication (including any attachments) is not intended or written to be used, and cannot be used, for the purpose of (i) avoiding tax-related penalties under the Internal Revenue Code, or (ii) promoting, marketing, or recommending to another party any transaction or matter addressed herein.