“We started out as a swim team.

“The water was just ‘a medium’ a fun way for us to rally together as the core group in a common interest - not just as a swim team either, but as TEAMS - of family, a network of extended family members bonded together to help grandma and grandpa, brother and sister, mom and dad, son and daughter, grandson and granddaughter, greats and great-greats. . . friends, neighbors - to support existing services, support organizations (be it schools, community centers, shelters or whatever) within our community; and, if necessary, by creating service opportunities of our own wherever we saw the lack.

“And all it would take, really is a little nudge here or there in the fabric of society. By us committing to doing the right thing at the right time in some really, really tiny way. That doing would make us all a healthier and happier society. If we continue to work together as that team it could begin with us. . . With us, you don’t even have to get in the water, much less swim to be a WaterWizard. Your camaraderie and hope are enough.”

DC's Water Wizards and the National Senior Games

The National Senior Games are held in a different city every other year. The event brings upwards of 3000 active seniors and 35,000 spectators to compete in and view all Olympic-type events like track and field, triathlon, swimming, tennis, basketball, in addition to bowling, horse shoes, badmitten, etc. DC's seniors have come back victorious from every games held over the last 20 years. In the last two games at Stanford University in 2009 and in Houston in 2011, the swimmers alone accounted for 8 gold medals, 4 silver, 11 bronze, and 30 place ribbons. In the past DC's swimmers have set national records. Who knows what the team is capable of this year in Minneapolis, Minnesota?

DC's Water Wizards are activist community builders, caring deeply about each other and seeking to bring citizens of all ages into better health through a safe and appropriate level of physical exercise and involvement. We represent the very best of the past and future this City has to offer and have the kind of community only dreamed of by many. We Seniors understand budget restraints all too well, which is why we are gearing up to help support the athletes who qualified to represent the City at 2015's National Senior Games, to be held in Minneapolis, MN, in July.
