

The Tale of True Prosperity

Dear Diary,

As I look forward to begin training in my 5-year-old year, it is a relief to have 2020 behind me.

I did get to race a few times but not as much or as well as I would have liked, which contributes to disappointment in my donations to Thoroughbred Retirement Foundation. My parents and partners weren't able to visit because of this thing called COVID - which I don't understand. Plus, one of my partners crossed the Rainbow Bridge and that made me sad.

Trying to stay positive and glad vacation will be over so I can get back to my racing figure, Beauty and fitness have always been my focus and will channel all my energy into keeping that up. My spa days are a must!

Mom is always on me about my attitude but she doesn't understand that helps me be a better racehorse. My dad sticks up for me because he says he doesn't want people getting fingerprints all over his princess! I mean, I do love them and want them with me but I just need to be independent right now.

I'll never admit this to anyone but sometimes I do get a little scared and I don't want to be weak so I work through it on my own.

This is going to be my "make or break" year so I know I have to do well. I look great and feel great and I have always been mentally more mature for my age.

Racing is my passion so I want to be successful at it. I know my parents are always happy that I try my best and finish safe and sound but, I want to win!!

Using the past to help me in the present combined with rigorous training just helps me get better and sassier. You go girl!

Let's do this 2021!
