

Dr. Raghupathi Matheyarasu.

Education

B. Sc., Agriculture, Annamalai University, India

M. Sc., Environmental Sciences, University of Mysore, India

Ph.D., Environmental Sciences, University of South Australia, Australia

Biography

Raghupathi Matheyarasu has obtained a Ph.D. in Environmental Science (Higher Degree by Research) in 2016 at the University of South Australia. Previously, he worked as a Senior Research Fellow (2011-2012) in Tamil Nadu Agricultural University and currently, working as a Research Assistant at the University of South Australia post-Ph.D. He has been recognized nationally and internationally by a number of awards and cash prizes for his outstanding contribution. He has published more than 5 papers in reputed Environmental Journals and more than 30 communications in national and international conferences and 200 plus popular science articles (edited a book on beekeeping); he represented team Australia in the first ever international soil judging event held in South Korea last year, as part of World Soil Science Congress.

Research Interests

- Soil fertility and management
- Contaminated site assessment
- Biodiversity / Ecology
- Natural resource conservations

Leisure activities

Poem writing, soccer, cricket, beach volleyball and swimming