'The Grand Egyptian Museum - a new home for King Tut and the finest collection of Egyptian antiquities in the world'

The new Grand Egyptian Museum (GEM) has been under construction for many years and the moment it opens to the public – in 2020 – is now approaching fast. Dozens of objects are being moved to from the old museum on Tahrir Square to the new site on a weekly basis, initially to a state-of-the-art conservation centre which has been up and running for several years.

The new displays will feature 100,000 objects, including all the items found by Howard Carter in the tomb of Tutankhamun. In preparation, everything has been removed from old display cases or storage boxes, the current condition assessed so that any conservation measures required can be undertaken.

'Tutankhamun in life and death - how new research on his grave goods are helping to understand the boy-king better than ever before'

In the process of the move to the Grand Egyptian Museum (GEM), many objects are being studied for the first time in decades, revealing new details about the life and death of the famous boy-king, and also his relatives.

Buffet lunch with be a selection of finger foods, teas and coffee and dessert and will be served in a Meeting room next to the Browser café
