George Lanthier, Instructor

Training on the current heating controls being installed & serviced today.

A seminar that focuses on the more complex of limit controls for air, steam and hot water systems. Covers both in-the-field and new controls entering the market. Features detailed information on troubleshooting limits after a brief review of the fundamentals of control theory. All required training materials are provided including a special book developed for this course and WIRING Book #1 by the course instructor. The program is not fuel specific and is ideal for anyone involved in residential heating system service and installation. All required training and service materials are provided. Seats are limited and sold only on a first-paid, first-seated basis and include lunch.
