Crys Newberry: bag, large goldfish box, crayon box, advertisement, certificate, seed packet

Liz Jones

Regina Kim

This packaging was designed and created to bring awareness and provide a solution to an environmental issue.

The bag was designed to take into Elementary school classrooms to teach about declining Monarch populations and give the children seed packets that they could plant.

This client needed an updated brand identity that catered more towards a growing market. The use of the colors and type give the brand a more direct visual link to the product itself.

The package design was created by our team and the client kept me on to finalize the design and production that would be sold through-out the South East.
