The inspiration for Karen Bard's propeller came from her travels to Africa. Karen (and the man of her dreams for the past 49 years) share a fascination with people of the world and as well as animals in their natural habitat.

Karen's ascribes her newest talent, playing with paint brushes, to a lightness of heart and a willingness to experiment.

For more than 30 years Karen Bard has helped Albuquerque families manage their financial lives. She does that by helping people recognize the real risk of money's declining purchasing power over a 30-year retirement. Her frequent advice: "Buy the great companies of the world, reinvest the dividends and ignore the news." We believe her when she says, "I can hardly wait for my next adventure!"

This year we have a new feature called - Guest Artist

To expand our audience and get people to the event who aren't necessarily working in aviation we invited a person from the community to be a guest artist and paint a propeller. The criteria had to be that they had never painted before and they were willing to try.

All for a good cause.

Juan Morales gave her a few pointers, a few tips and a few techniques and the results are fabulous!

Meet Karen Bard, our first "guest" artist! We have a feeling she will be painting for years to come.
