"If you have the faith the size of a mustard seed, you will say to this mountain, 'Move from here to there,' and it will move; and nothing will be impossible to you."

(Matt. 17:20)

May 2014

Issue 0007

Those of you who have been receiving and reading this newsletter, and especially those who have a heart to pray for those on our prayer list, have come across continued prayer for a young man by the name of David. He is only fourteen years old and has been struggling with cancer for several years. David's struggle is not his alone as his parents; siblings, friends, and other family members have been affected by David's illness. Although David has a special place in our hearts here at the Lord's Mountain Movers, his story is not unique by any means.

The world would look at this situation and say, where is God now? How could a God who is love allow something like this to happen to a young person such as David, or any other child for that matter? Some unlearned Christians might even respond as Jesus' disciples did when they ran into the man outside the temple who was born blind. Their question to Jesus was, "Who sinned, this man or his parents that he would be born blind?" (John 9:2) It is a typical response for someone who was bent on finding someone to blame or hold guilty.

Jesus' response was, "It was neither that this man sinned, nor his parents, but it was so that the works of God might be displayed in him." (John 9:3) Instead of trying to blame or find fault, maybe, just maybe, we should be looking to see what God does in and through the situation. I am not trying to say that David, or anyone else, will receive the immediate healing that the blind man received. What I am saying is that God can be found working in every situation, and I mean every situation. We may not understand or agree with God, but as Christians we are to trust and have faith in Him. No matter what!

I want to share with you a recent note from David's mother. I believe that it may help you to realize that God does see and care about those who are suffering and those who suffer right along with them.

Greetings Family, Friends and Church,

Life continues to center on getting David as strong as he can be as transplant looms around the corner, date still unknown. He's been home for about 3 weeks now and happy to be in his own bed with Jack right beside him wherever he goes. We are settling into a routine, physical therapy 3 times a week, clinic 1-2 times a week, and counseling to help deal with the emotions that come with leukemia and relapse. Each day he gets stronger physically, emotionally, and spiritually. He sleeps less and is awake more. His counts are climbing making it possible to go out in large crowds and return to church. It was so nice to be in church Easter Sunday, and we hope he continues to have the strength to go each Sunday.

Transplant is on hold at the moment due to a lung infection during his inpatient stay and waiting for genetic testing to see what dosing of conditioning chemo he can handle. David is very sensitive to chemo, so the doctors will need to get the doses right for his body.

This also means that while he's in remission, he might need more chemo to get as close to 0 leukemia in the blood as possible. Right now he's at 0.5%, a very good number and one the team did not expect to get after one month of high dose chemo but not quite low enough for David. We need to get the best possible result from transplant, remission forever, so he may head to more chemo after the infection is clear. He had a CT scan yesterday which showed 80% of the pneumonia is gone, 20% to go. Again, the doctors were surprised with such a good response to antibiotics since it usually takes months to get rid of this kind of infection in a cancer kid. Two more weeks of home IV antibiotics and antifungal med and another CT scan to follow to see if things are all clear. Today, David has a bone marrow aspirate to see if he's closer to 0.1%, the desired number to go to transplant. Once he hits that number and the pneumonia is clear, transplant will accept him into his service. In the mean time, they are holding a spot for him.

Ed and I are trying to get rested up for transplant. It's not easy. David's home meds require getting up at night, so 8 hours of sleep is hard for one of us. Going back and forth for so many appointments is also tiring. Ed goes back to working 3 days a week next week so less help at home. We somehow have managed and know we will through relapse too. We sleep when we can, have found an exercise routine that works, and get out and have fun as often as David is up to it.

Sam finishes exams on May 21st and will be home this summer to help out with David, find summer work, and hopefully find internship hours in technical theater. Oh, and have some fun too, something about a camping trip with college friends.

Life is good in the midst of relapse. There have been sad moments, trials, and heartache and do not always do it well, but there is also joy, peace and love. We cherish each day, each moment, and our lives together. There is so much good. We thank you for your prayers and support, your cards, meals, Easter basket, friendship, visits from our families and church family, and especially for love. It fills us with the strength to keep on keeping on. It eases the burden and lightens the load. For this we give thanks to God and to you.

Peace,
Kathy

As you can read, this family is laden with the burden of a sick child in every area of their lives, and has been for many years. Kathy shares many, but not all, of things they are going through. But the key is in the last paragraph of her wonderful letter. She says, "There have been sad moments, trials, and heartache and do not always do it well, but there is also joy, peace and love." This is an oxymoron for an unbeliever. How can there be all this weight and negativity yet in the midst of it there is joy, peace, and love? It is only because they know, trust, and have faith in a God who is right there with them in all of this.

One could be misled into thinking that this family's burdens do not weigh them down; the truth is that they find themselves at the breaking point quite often. Kathy, David, and the rest of the family are often taken to the point where they are hanging on by a very thin thread of hope. The physical, emotional, financial, and spiritual is overwhelming. In a recent note from Kathy she points this truth out.

Some people might think that I do not let the burden of this life get me down but cling to God. While I cling to God, the burden can be too much and definitely bring me down to very low points sometimes, not enough to break my bond with God but enough to question, fear and lose hope. I call this my valley of the shadow of death. It is the walking through this valley, sometimes alone, but often times with others who suffer with me in my story, that God's presence is made visible through the love of others. The Christian journey is not one of solidarity, but one shared within community. There are moments of solidarity for sure, but most of it is within community. Just today, David's therapist waved his fee because he feels that he cannot take our money when he is blessed in the offering of his services as David invites him into his story. He experiences God's grace, mercy and love as he listens to David share his feelings of compassion for those he himself suffers with, other children who struggle and even die. And David experiences emotional healing as he shares his story. God is in the midst of this blessing and healing. Often times the church runs from real community with those who suffer, when God is calling the church to engage the suffering, to enter into suffering and suffer in solidarity. God is in the midst of suffering, fully present for all who engage. These are kingdom moments right here and now, a taste of what is to come, the here yet not yet moment of the kingdom. It is risky because these are painful places to go, to the sick and dying, to the prison, to the poor, to the margins.

This family's story should be a wake up call for every Christian. We would do well to learn some valuable lessons from their reality. This could be you one day, or someone you know and care about. What will you do when you are taken to this breaking point? Or what will you do for someone you know when they are taken there? I myself am a cancer survivor and have no problem personally ministering to someone in that situation. Would I have done this without having been there? I would like to believe I would. I think most of us would all rather fellowship with those who have no problems, people who would not burden us in any way. I remember Jesus responding to those who ridiculed him for hanging out with people who were in need. He said, "It is not those who are healthy who need a physician, but those who are sick." (Matt. 9:12)

In this family's time of need God has manifested Himself to them through those individuals who He has brought into their life to help them through this. There has been no great miracle yet. What there has been is a loving God who is comforting them in so many little ways, i.e. food, prayers, cards, visits, friendships, and most of all love. And isn't that what God is? So many people respond by saying, "Well I just don't know what to say to them." I have never heard God speak audibly, but I have heard Him through the love others have shown to me in His name.

My hope is that if you are in a tough situation and God doesn't seem to be there that you will take a step back and look with a different set of eyes and see Him working. Remember what Jesus told His disciples, "but it was so that the works of God might be displayed in him." If you are a person who knows someone in a similar situation, I pray that you will display the works of God by just doing one of the simple things others have done for Kathy and her family. It may not seem like much, but look at the effect it has had on

Kathy and what she said about those things, “It eases the burden and lightens the load. For this we give thanks to God and to you.”

Jesus said, “Come to Me, all who are weary and heavy-laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you and learn from Me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and YOU WILL FIND REST FOR YOUR SOULS. For My yoke is easy and My burden is light.” Is there enough Jesus in you to make this verse come true in someone’s life today?

In His service,
Pastor Pete

A Testimony (by Phillip D.)

My life has always been graced by God. I never really fully understood how he was a part of my life and why. I come from good parents and have four older brothers. When I was about 14 years old I started to turn to alcohol and drugs. Although my parents were not religious they did their best to raise me properly. At age 15 I received my first felony conviction. At age 42 I received my last. After serving my last sentence I decided to change. It kind of worked, I supposed, because I am hear now to relate my story. I started to do the program of A.A. in 2008. It never really worked for me until February 1, 2014. On this day I had an awakening like no one I had ever had before. On this day I began my pilgrimage to meet up with my future mentor, Pastor Pete.

Why the thought and urge to finally give up my old ways and thinking that particular night, I can’t explain. I had been in much more dire situations before and prayed and hoped for the best. This time I felt a certain confidence I never knew before. I had known Pastor Pete before for just a few days, but knew he was going to help me change my life. And so he has, and continues, to help me understand and love the Lord to this very day.

I know that my problem before getting involved with and trying to live a “normal” sober life was I put the program first with God second. I now do the opposite and have a very happy meaningful life. I do not have that feeling of, “something is missing.” Today, and everyday, I study the Word of God and rely on His guidance. My desire and obsession to drink has been lifted and I know that on that night the Lord reached out to me and let me know I have been released from my bondage and suffering. I would not have been able to understand this without the help of Pastor Pete. I just wish everybody could have the same awakening as I have had.

We want you!

That’s right, the Lord’s Mountain Movers Ministry wants you to be a bigger part of what we are doing in God’s kingdom. We would like to include something each month from our faithful readers such as; poems, drawings, short testimonials, or other such items. All submissions must be within Christian thinking and acting. We will choose at least one submission each month for inclusion into the monthly newsletter. If your submission does not make it in that month we will keep it for upcoming issues. You may send your submissions to the address listed at the bottom of this page.

I thank you all for your encouragement and prayers that continue to come in. We look forward to what God will do for His great name. I also thank those of you who have taken the time to write and please know that your letters are important and will be answered. May God bless you and continue to grow you into the person He desires.
