Nonetheless, various programmes exist in the country, in the Universities and higher institutions, in other disciplines such as economics, nutrition, pedagogy, psychology, biology, environment, nursing, law and medicine that touch on aspects of ECD. The Faculty of Education Sciences at the University of Kinshasa planned an early childhood education programme but it never started. Also, the School of Public Health at the University of Kinshasa is organizing a doctoral-level programme called DEA (which is the French postgraduate certificate, a pre-requisite to doctoral studies) of 16 months which allows learners to conduct research in order to go on to defend a thesis and receive a Ph.D. in Public Health. Other faculties in the Universities are also organising a DEA for Assistants and Heads of Research who will receive a Ph.D. in their respective fields after defending their thesis.

NIGERIA [English]	In addition to the above 4 Colleges of Education there were initially 23 others (institutions training teachers for basic education, ECD inclusive) until by 2010 the number increased to 86. This increase was a result of National Commission for Colleges of Education directives that all Colleges of Education should be restructured into five schools namely-Schools of ECCE, Primary, Junior, Adult and Technology. This means more opportunities to admit ECD teachers and caregivers for 3 year training, increasing both the number and quality of ECD teachers and caregivers.

UGANDA [English]		No university offers a Masters programme in ECE/ECD. As of July 2010 there are currently 83 ECD training institutions that are privately managed and run. They offer mainly Certificates in Early Childhood Development. The Ministry of Education and Sports is in the process of validating them and later in 2010 a number of them will be accredited. Registration certificates for the training institutions and ECD caregivers/teachers will be given to whoever meets the set criteria.
