

There's no invasion of privacy if you write down their DL # and run the check through the DMV. Having a valid driver's license is a condition of employment for a carrier, especially when they are driving a postal-owned vehicle on the clock. We have every right and justification to verify the status of their licenses.