

How Presidents Govern: Crash Course Government and Politics #14

1. True or False: The President is the entire executive branch. _____
2. True or False: The Presidents makes ALL the policy decisions _____
3. True or False: The Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense play a significant role in the administration, especially if there's a lot of foreign policy issues to deal with. _____
4. Who leads the Justice Department? _____
5. True or False: The postal service is one of the oldest functioning government agencies, although it's now a government corporation, which means it's supposed to earn money and be self-funding.
6. What is the best known Independent agency? _____
7. The President has three main strategies at his disposal: party leadership, mobilizing public opinion, and _____ strategies.
8. Which strategy is the most important? _____
9. One of the most important examples of this is the expanded reach of the Office of Management and Budget, or _____, to plan the budget and exercise huge influence over how government money is _____.
10. True or False: The most important administrative strategy that the President has at his disposal is the executive order. _____
11. Administrative strategies usually happen outside of the public eye which makes it easier for the President to _____. Courts usually defer to administrative actions, especially in the area of national defense
12. Explain one argument that would be in favor of an expanded presidency?