

Have you ever heard the saying “Two heads are better than one?” At djd. InDepth Consulting Services, we believe in that motto to the highest degree. We have designed a platform for Entrepreneurs and those desiring to become Entrepreneurs to participate in group sessions where they can gain knowledge and expertise from in and outside of their business industries. In these sessions, focused conversations take place to address specific business needs, and or industry gaps. Participants walk away with an increased understanding of the subject matter and also gain professional connections to assist them in growing their business even further.

Participating in group mentoring is a great way to not only gain information, but also provide information to those less seasoned in a particular subject matter. This is not a “networking” session, however, it is a great way to connect to business professionals on all levels and gain perspectives that could impact your business.

Ways to benefit from group mentoring:

- Allows professionals to gain insight from perspective peers
- Provides a platform for business development and goal setting
- Generates a sense of confidence for the business owner to have others validate their business idea or process
- Is an avenue to increase the professional network through resource sharing and application
