Jean Edward Smith – Memorial Note

Historian, biographer of Presidents Grant, FDR, Eisenhower, George W. Bush, and of Justice John Marshall, and General Lucius Clay, Jean died on September 1, 2019, just a week after publication of his final book, The Liberation of Paris. He has been called "today's foremost biographer of formidable figures in American history."

At McKinley High School (DC), he was active in student government. At Princeton he majored in Politics, wrote his senior thesis on "Law Enforcement under the Constitution" and served as a research assistant in the Politics Department. He was a member of Charter Club.

Jean served in the U.S. Army from 1954 to 1961 in West Berlin and Dachau, during which he married Christine Zinsel. He published his doctoral dissertation, The Defense of Berlin, before receiving his Ph.D. in Government from Columbia in 1964. He also attended Harvard Law School and Stanford Graduate School. He taught at Dartmouth, The University of Toronto, Marshall University in Huntington, WV and as a visiting professor at several other universities.

Jean was an active participant in 1954 class activities, including his address to the class entitled "General Presidents: Washington, Grant, and Eisenhower" at a mini-reunion, held, appropriately, at Mount Vernon.

He is survived by Christine, his wife of 60 years, daughter Sonja '86, son Christopher, USNA '89 and four grandchildren.

The class thanks him for his service to the country.

Jean Edward Smith - Obituary – New York Times

Biographer of the Underrated, Dies at 86

His books helped restore the reputations of Grant and Eisenhower and return John Marshall to the forefront of the American story.

Jean Edward Smith in an undated photo. George F. Will called him “today’s foremost biographer of formidable figures in American history.”

Jean Edward Smith, a political scientist and renowned biographer whose works helped restore luster to the tarnished reputations of underrated presidents, died on Sept. 1 at his home in Huntington, W.Va. He was 86.

The cause was complications of Parkinson’s disease, his wife, Christine Smith, said. In a long academic career, Dr. Smith had taught at Marshall University in Huntington for 12 years.

Dr. Smith was, in the words of the commentator George F. Will, “today’s foremost biographer of formidable figures in American history.”

His subjects ranged from the relatively obscure, like Lucius D. Clay, the American Army officer who oversaw occupied Germany after World War II, to the most historically consequential, like Franklin D. Roosevelt. Dr. Smith won the Francis Parkman Prize for his book “FDR” (2008), a door-stopper that ran 858 pages. (“Altogether, an exemplary and highly readable work that ably

Be the first to see reviews, news and features in The New York Times Book Review.

He was perhaps best known for biographies of Ulysses S. Grant and Dwight D. Eisenhower, presidents who at times received low approval ratings from historians, and of Chief Justice John Marshall, whose legacy had seemed to have been lost in the flood of attention paid to the nation’s founders.

Dr. Smith's biography "Grant" (2001) was among those that helped rehabilitate the 18th president's reputation as an effective chief executive, despite overseeing an administration rife with corruption.

Dr. Smith showed that Grant's poor reputation as president had been fostered in part by biased graduate students at Columbia University who wrote the first studies of Reconstruction.

Dr. Smith's biographies hailed the presidencies of Roosevelt and Grant but scorned that of George W. Bush.

"Their work was written from a white-supremacist point of view — 'The Birth of a Nation' with footnotes," the historian Richard Brookhiser wrote in reviewing "Grant" in The New York Times Book Review. Grant supported Reconstruction and sought to make it work. He freed his own slave in 1859, and, as president, Mr. Brookhiser wrote, he "crushed the Ku Klux Klan, the White Leagues and other white-power banditti in the South."

The book was a finalist for the 2002 Pulitzer Prize in biography, which went to David McCullough for "John Adams."

Similarly, in "Eisenhower in War and Peace" (2012), Dr. Smith refuted the common perception of Eisenhower as a dullard.

"From the very beginning of his military career, Smith argues persuasively, Eisenhower was a shrewd political operator who concealed his acumen and ambition behind an affable facade," Wendy Smith wrote in The Los Angeles Times.

The book touched on Eisenhower's blunders during the war. But, Ms. Smith wrote, "What made him a great leader, in Smith's assessment, was his willingness to take responsibility for his mistakes, learn from them and move on."

Dr. Smith was not enamored of all his subjects. His "Bush" (2016) was a scathing indictment, starting with this blunt opening sentence: "Rarely in the history of the United States has the nation been so ill-served as during the presidency of George W. Bush."

His book on Marshall — "John Marshall: Definer of a Nation" (1996) — renewed interest in the longtime chief justice after decades of neglect.

"Before Smith wrote his biography, there was a dearth of material interpreting his life and his legacy in the modern day," Patricia Proctor, director of the Simon Perry Center for Constitutional Democracy at Marshall University, said in an phone interview. “If you read books by other historians on the founding period, you see they all cite Smith when talking about Marshall.”

President Bill Clinton once said that “Jean Edward Smith’s biography of John Marshall showed me how as chief justice in Marbury v. Madison he built the case for the American nation, and that’s one of the most important things in American history.”

Jean Edward Smith was born on Oct. 13, 1932, in Washington. His father, Jean M. Smith, was a barber at the Capitol on the House side. His mother, Eddyth (Carter) Smith, was a secretary in the Justice Department.

He attended McKinley Technology High School, graduating in 1950 and going on to Princeton, where he majored in political science and English. He was in R.O.T.C. at Princeton, and after graduating in 1954 he served in the Army for seven years.

Stationed in Germany, he met his future wife there, Christine Zinsel. She was in law school and he was a young lieutenant on his way to becoming a captain. They were married in 1959.

In addition to his wife, Dr. Smith is survived by a daughter, Sonja Bauer; a son, Charles; and four grandchildren.

Returning from Germany in 1961, he went on to receive his doctorate in public law and government from Columbia, in 1964. His first book, “The Defense of Berlin” (1963), which recounted the events leading to the building of the Berlin Wall, was published before he began his doctoral studies. In an unusual move, Columbia accepted it as his dissertation. Johns Hopkins University Press plans to republish it later this year.

Dr. Smith began his teaching career at Dartmouth, leaving in 1965 for the University of Toronto, which offered him tenure. He taught there for 35 years and became a Canadian citizen, holding dual citizenship. Over the years he had been a visiting professor at Columbia, Princeton and Georgetown. He joined the Marshall faculty after retiring from Toronto in 1999 and wrote many of his more notable books in West Virginia.

“He was utterly dedicated to his writing,” his wife said. “Not much would interfere with it.” He would work solid for two months, then travel briefly with his wife, and then “it was back to the grindstone,” she said.

She said he had been a highly disciplined writer, rising by dawn and working until the early afternoon. He wrote his books in longhand on yellow legal pads, to be typed up later by a secretary.

His last book, “The Liberation of Paris: How Eisenhower, de Gaulle, and von Choltitz Saved the City of Light,” was published this summer.

At a celebration for the book, Montserrat Miller, executive director of the John Deaver Drinko Academy, an arm of Marshall that promotes civic engagement, said “The Liberation of Paris” shows “how three individuals with much that divided them could each choose to do the right thing.”

Their example, she said, “gives us hope and offers us promise at a time when too many have embraced cynicism and despair.”

Jean Edward Smith – Obituary – Washington Post

Jean Edward Smith, a scholar who was one of the most admired biographers of his time, the author of smoothly written accounts of several presidents, including Ulysses S. Grant, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Dwight D. Eisenhower, that became prizewinning bestsellers, died Sept. 1 at his home in Huntington, W.Va. He was 86.

He had complications from Parkinson’s disease, said his wife, Christine Smith.

Dr. Smith, a Washington-born political scientist who spent seven years as an Army officer, was a faculty member at the University of Toronto for many years and later taught at Marshall University in West Virginia. His first books were on German politics, but beginning in the 1990s, he became a prolific chronicler of the lives of major figures in U.S. history, and was praised by historians and everyday readers alike.

In 2012, Columbia University historian Henry F. Graff called Dr. Smith “indubitably America’s most distinguished biographer.”

Jean Edward Smith. (Christine Smith)

His 2001 study of Grant, the Civil War general who later served two terms as president, was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize and helped raise scholars’ estimation of Grant’s effectiveness as president.

Grant was a failure in business — “He was too tenderhearted to be a rent collector, and too candid to sell real estate,” Dr. Smith wrote — but something of a genius as a military leader who proved to be the Union army’s greatest general. As a president, Dr. Smith wrote, Grant was underestimated by patrician historians and by defenders of the Confederacy, who resented his efforts to promote voting rights for African Americans and to eliminate the Ku Klux Klan.

Dr. Smith's 2007 biography of Roosevelt, titled simply "FDR," won the Francis Parkman Prize of the Society of American Historians as the year's best book on American history.

"He is that rarest and most welcome of historians, one who addresses a serious popular readership without sacrificing high scholarly standards," Washington Post book critic Jonathan Yardley wrote in his review. "He conveys the full flavor and import of Roosevelt's career without ever bogging down in detail.

"In sum, Smith's 'FDR' is a model presidential biography."

Dozens of writers and historians have attempted to tell the story of Roosevelt's life, but Dr. Smith approached it as something of a sociological puzzle.

"The riddle for a biographer," he wrote, "is to explain how this Hudson River aristocrat, a son of privilege who never depended on a paycheck, became the champion of the common man."

He determined that Roosevelt had "an incredible capacity for making people feel at ease and convincing them their work was important." Even under great duress, he could remain "serene and confident, unruffled and unafraid."

Dr. Smith's 2012 biography of Eisenhower also led to a reassessment of his presidency, once dismissed as a staid period of conformity. Instead, Dr. Smith pronounced Eisenhower second only to Roosevelt as "the most successful president of the 20th century."

He showed how Eisenhower's experience as the top Allied commander in Europe during World War II made him wary of military engagement, writing, "War was neither a board game nor a seminar exercise for armchair intellectuals."

"The greatest virtue of his biography," Yale historian John Lewis Gaddis wrote in the New York Times about Dr. Smith's book, "is to show how well Eisenhower's military training prepared him for this task: like Grant, he made what he did seem easy. It never was, though, and Smith stresses the toll it took on Eisenhower's health, on his marriage and ultimately in the loneliness he could never escape."

Dr. Smith was not always complimentary toward his subjects. He wrote disparagingly of both President George H.W. Bush and his son, President George W. Bush, for launching hasty, poorly planned wars, seemingly as vanity projects. He was particularly scathing toward the younger Bush.

“Rarely in the history of the United States has the nation been so ill-served as during the presidency of George W. Bush,” Dr. Smith wrote in a 2016 biography. He praised Bush’s initiatives to combat AIDS in Africa and to shore up the economy after the 2008 financial crash, but he left little doubt of what he thought of the legacy of the 43rd president.

“Whether George W. Bush was the worst president in American history will be long debated,” he concluded, “but his decision to invade Iraq is easily the worst foreign policy decision ever made by an American president.”

Jean Edward Smith was born Oct. 13, 1932, in Washington. His father was a barber at the U.S. Capitol, and his mother was a secretary at the Justice Department. He developed an interest in history, his wife said, from his grandmother, who read books aloud to him.

Dr. Smith graduated from McKinley Tech High School in the District, then from Princeton University in 1954. He was an Army artillery officer, primarily in Germany, and in 1963 published his first book, “The Defense of Berlin,” about events leading up to the building of the Berlin Wall. Columbia University accepted the book as a dissertation and awarded Dr. Smith a PhD in 1964 in the field of public law and government.

He taught at Dartmouth College before joining the faculty of Toronto University in 1965, eventually becoming a dual citizen of Canada and the United States. After 35 years, he moved to Marshall University, which was named for 19th-century Chief Justice John Marshall. Dr. Smith published a well-regarded biography of Marshall in 1996 and held the university’s John Marshall professorship in political science.

During his 12 years at Marshall, where he taught both graduate and undergraduate courses, Dr. Smith wrote several books, composing in longhand on legal pads. He was also a visiting scholar at Columbia and Georgetown universities.

Among his books was a 1990 biography of Lucius D. Clay, a U.S. Army general who was a key figure in the Berlin Airlift after World War II and in developing the government and financial system of West Germany, the democratic half of the divided postwar German state.

Dr. Smith’s final book, “The Liberation of Paris,” about how Allied forces drove Nazi occupiers out of Paris in 1944, was published in July.

Survivors include his wife since 1959, the former Christine Zinsel, of Huntington; two children, Sonja Bauer of Washington and Christopher Smith of San Francisco; and four grandchildren.

Dr. Smith was reluctant to rate presidents, but he believed that Franklin Roosevelt — “too talented to be confined by the circumstances of his birth” — was the most gifted natural politician in U.S. history.

Even when entertaining Britain’s King George VI, he had the common touch, He served hot dogs to the king, but Roosevelt’s mother cautioned him against making cocktails, noting that there was only one proper beverage for royalty.

“ ‘Mother says we should have tea,’ Roosevelt told the King,” Dr. Smith wrote. “ ‘My mother would have said the same thing,’ His Majesty replied — at which point FDR reached for the martini shaker.”

Robert Van Cleve – Obituary

Dr. ROBERT BALDWIN VAN CLEVE - A LIFE WELL LIVED. December 1, 1931-July 8, 2019

What goes around the world and stays in one corner? If you know the answer (a stamp), you probably know or have met Dr. Robert Van Cleve. Born in St. Louis, Missouri, on December 1, 1931, to Catherine and Bill Van Cleve, Bob had an older brother William (Bill) and younger sister Cornelia (Connie).

It delighted Bob to be related to Daniel Boone and the Wright Brothers. His father was the editor and co-owner of Bob's local hometown newspaper, The Moberly Monitor-Index. When General Omar Bradley, who grew up in Moberly and was a hero of World War II and the last five-star general, returned to his hometown for a visit, he went to the newspaper office where Bob happened to be. The General treated him to a game of catch, which Bob never forgot. He followed up on that game by playing catcher for the local Ban Johnson baseball team and for a local softball team.

To earn money, Bob spent summers working as a paperboy, a trackman for the Wabash Railroad and a garbage collector, which his sister loved because he would bring her trinkets from the trash. Bob saved enough money from these endeavors to buy his true love an engagement ring years later.

Bob and his brother had pneumonia several times as young children before the discovery of penicillin. To keep them safe, their mother took them to Tucson, Arizona for the winter when Bob was in third grade. He tried to run away but ended up having a good time riding horses and having new experiences. During two summers in his boyhood, his mother took him and his brother to the Vassar Summer Institute, where he stayed in a cabin with other boys and only saw his mother for an hour a day. It was like a camp for Bob and school for his mother, who learned the latest theories in child development. It was a life changing experience for Bob and led to his going to Phillips Academy Andover MA prep school when he was 16.

At first, he was very homesick, but he ended up loving it. Bob was nicknamed Mobe after his hometown and was known as the defender of the “common man.” Most boys there were from wealthy families, but Bob wasn’t. He got The Monitor-Index delivered regularly and it became more popular on campus than the New York Times as a source for news. When he graduated, Bob’s parents bought a new Buick Roadmaster for the long trip from Moberly to Massachusetts as a surprise. Upon arriving, they suggested he drive them around campus. Bob seemed a little sheepish about this. All of a sudden, a fellow student named Howard Johnson, who was from a famous family of restaurant and motel owners, ran out in the middle of the road, put up his hands and yelled, “Behold the little man driving a 4-hole Buick!” Then his parents understood why Bob was embarrassed about driving the car!

Bob graduated from Andover in 1950, Princeton University in 1954 and Columbia’s College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1958. He became a board certified internist and cardiologist and practiced for fifty years. Early in his career, he served as Lieutenant Commander at Balboa Naval Hospital in San Diego. There he conducted a double-blind study and wrote the lead article in the leading medical cardiology journal, which showed that patients could come off Coumadin. Letters asking for copies of the article poured in from all over the world, including from Iron Curtain countries. When he left the Navy, 200 officers who were his patients gave him a farewell dinner and gift. Bob then accepted the Harvard cardiology fellowship at Massachusetts General Hospital with Paul Dudley White, President Eisenhower’s doctor.

In 1965, Bob and his growing family moved to Jacksonville where he joined the Riverside Clinic. He was the second board certified cardiologist in North Florida. He wanted to do three things in his profession: give his patients the best possible medical care (including limiting the number of patients he treated so he could spend more time with each patient); treat people who couldn’t pay; and teach doctors and nurses in training. Bob accomplished the latter two by regularly volunteering at Duval Medical Center (now Florida Health) where he was appointed an adjunct professor of the University of Florida. In Jacksonville, he helped Dr. Roy Baker create the first responder program, training firemen to perform cardioversion (which Bob called “zapping”) and other medical techniques. He also admitted the first Black patients to Riverside Hospital.

For fifty years, Bob knew all of his patients, their families, their religious affiliations, their pets, and always listened carefully to their concerns. He prayed with them and for them and they became his friends. At his retirement, he celebrated by giving a party for his patients.

Bob's religious life was even more important to him. As a child, Bob did not go to Sunday School regularly until he wanted to join the church softball team. As an adult, he attended infrequently until his wife and best friend, Mayor Ed Austin, coerced him into attending Cursillo in 1985. The Lord took over his life after that and used him in many ways: as a healer of body and soul, as a mentor to youth, as an elder and trustee in the First Presbyterian Church and as a messenger of the Gospel to others through his riddles and jokes. He even gave a prize of a $2 bill to those who could answer correctly. His other community activities included life membership on the Salvation Army Board, being a board member at Episcopal School of Jacksonville (where he gave the commencement address in 1982, a few years after John McCain), serving as chairman of the Jacksonville Recreation Advisory Council, and being a captain and king of Ye Mystic Revellers.

Last but by no means least in importance to Bob was his family. He met his wife, Sarah Towers, when they were seniors in college and told a friend after the first date that he was going to marry "that girl." A year later, he proposed when he went to her classroom at Fishweir Elementary school and wrote on the chalkboards, "Will you marry me?" They were ideal lovers and friends, ready for any adventure, often with their four children and, later, the spouses and grandchildren. They camped all over the country, including their beloved Cumberland Island where they had a home. They celebrated Thanksgivings there, caught and released armadillos, hunted shark teeth, and made many indelible memories. Their family experiences ranged from bears eating their candy in Yellowstone Park to getting lost overnight on a canoe trip in Apalachicola National Forest to rappelling down mountains to bungee jumping in New Zealand to sharing scary stories around campfires.

At home, Bob organized Sunday afternoon touch football games, which became legendary. He also played golf (winning the Timuquana Pow Wow championship), tennis (winning many Yacht Club and Timuquana championships), ping pong (winning the doubles city championship), checkers (winning church championships from 1995 to 2003, except for one year when he was out of town and his son won for him), basketball and volleyball. Renewing his childhood love of softball, he played catcher on the Riverside Hospital team. All were played with extreme competitiveness. Bob usually won and gleefully reminded others of his victories on the yearly Christmas cards, which included everybody's scores. In later years, the board game Sequence was Bob's competitive outlet. He often won, and when he didn't, he kept playing to even the score, making for very late nights at the Sequence table.

Bob and Sarah loved to travel and went to all the continents except Antarctica. With children and grandchildren in tow, they went on cruises, on scuba adventures, on visits to Mayan ruins and many other trips, all the time enriching the lives of their offspring. On his 80th birthday in St. Augustine, he zip-lined over alligators and crocodiles, which greatly impressed his grandchildren. They also shared many memories of their grandfather, particularly being mentored by Bob for confirmation into the church. His enthusiasm for religious discussion and his sincere interest in what the young people thought and felt made that one-on-one experience with him a treasured time.

Bob Van Cleve marched to his own drummer. A Democrat until he was forty (including attending the Democratic National Convention in 1952), he became a proud Republican and loved sparring with any willing Democrat. He loved his childhood, the schools he attended, his patients, his church, his family, playing tennis, and interacting with others through his jokes and conversations. At the center of it all was his love for Sarah, his wife of 64 years.

Saddened by his loss is his family, Drs. Beth and Alan Weldon (Sarah and Jeff Chilson, Murphy, Polly and Mac), Catherine and Greg Bauman (Katie and Anna), Sis Van Cleve Miller and Tib Miller (Pepper and Gram), and Robert and Elizabeth Van Cleve (Sally, Tucker and Meg), his sister, Connie Williamson, and his nephews and nieces.

His funeral will be at First Presbyterian Church, 118 East Monroe, on August 17, 2019 at 2 p.m. In lieu of flowers, please send donations to The Salvation Army, the First Presbyterian Church, or the Dr. Robert B. Van Cleve and Elizabeth Towers Scholarship Fund at Episcopal School of Jacksonville.

James D. Mallory, Jr. – Memorial Note

Jim, one of four psychiatrists in the United States named as “pioneers in the integration of Christianity and Psychiatry”, died on March 23, 2019.

He prepared for Princeton at Anniston High School (AL) and McCallie School in Chattanooga, TN. At Princeton, he majored in biology, was a member of Cannon Club, and participated in I.A.A. football, track, and swimming.

He earned his medical degree from Duke University in 1958. After a straight internship at Duke, he served four years in the Air Force as chief of the Air Force clinic at Orlando, Florida Air Force Base. A spiritual experience led him to commit his life to God and to return to Duke University to specialize in the one area of medicine that he had liked the least as a medical student, Psychiatry. "God is always up to something" he often said. He went on to become director of the Atlanta Counseling Center for 36 years before retiring to Nashville, TN in 2007.

Jim is survived by his wife of 63 years, Betsy Tippet Mallory and their four children, James Davis Mallory III (Kelly), Dr. Roger Lee Mallory (Susan), Elizabeth Deaver Corzine (Charles) and John Molett Mallory (Kim); a sister, JoAnn Dean and a brother, The Reverend Richard Mallory. He was a loving grandfather of 13 grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren.

James D. Mallory Jr

James Davis Mallory, Jr. died on March 23, 2019, having fully lived his 87 years with purpose.

After graduating from McCallie School in Chattanooga and from Princeton University, he received his medical degree and internship in internal medicine at Duke University in 1959. Following graduation, he received a degree in Aerospace Medicine as flight surgeon and was chief of the Air Force clinic at Orlando, Florida Air Force Base for four years during the Cuban Missile Crisis.

It was in Orlando that a major change occurred in his life when Dr. Mallory committed his life to God, in a way that he had never done before, so that serving Him as an agent of healing became the focus of his remaining life. To everyone's surprise, this led him to return to Duke University in 1963 to specialize in the one area of medicine that he liked the least as a medical student, Psychiatry. "God is always up to something" he often said.

In 2010, Dr Mallory was one of four psychiatrists in the United States named by Dr. Alan Nelson in his "A Christian Legacy in Psychiatry" as pioneers in the integration of Christianity and Psychiatry. Before retiring to Nashville, Tennessee in 2007, Dr. Mallory was the director of the Atlanta Counseling Center for 36 years.

Dr. Mallory was the son of the late Lena Deaver and James Davis Mallory, Sr. of Anniston, Alabama. He is survived by his wife of 63 years, Betsy Tippet Mallory and their four children, James Davis Mallory III (Kelly) of Georgia, Dr. Roger Lee Mallory (Susan) of Colorado, Elizabeth Deaver Corzine (Charles) and John Violet Mallory (Kim) of Tennessee; a sister, JoAnn Dean of Georgia and a brother, The Reverend Richard Mallory of Phoenix, Arizona. He was a loving grandfather of 13 grandchildren, Davis, Judson Mallory and Garland Mallory Kazmierski; Austin, Chase and Brandon Mallory; Sean, Mallory, and Allie Corzine; Nathaniel, Raynor, Walker and Schaeffer Mallory and seven great-grandchildren.

Theodore George Koerner III – Memorial Note

Ted Koerner – History major, Cloister member, veteran, attorney, amateur chef, gardener, and lover of politics, The Times crossword puzzles, Trivial Pursuit, movies, Sinatra and his late wife, Donalda (“Donnie”) – died on March 4, 2019.

Ted came to us from Maine Township High School (IL). He wrote his senior thesis on “The Progressive Movement in 1924”, played softball, volleyball, and hockey, and played in the Football and Concert Bands.

His pursuit of a law degree the University of Michigan Law School began in 1954 but was interrupted by two years as an Army officer in Korea (which accounts for his love of old reruns of MASH,) and was completed in 1959. He then practiced law engaged in real estate, and was admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court, the Supreme Courts of Illinois and the U.S. Court of Military Appeals.

Ted met Donnie while both were active in real estate. They enjoyed gardening a wide variety of vegetables, entertaining and providing gourmet dinners to friends and relatives, and taking two-month vacations in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico every year.

He is survived by his five stepchildren: Paul Anderson, Robin (Thomas) Mahaffey, Christina (David) Anderson, Glen (Suyapa) Anderson, and Kirk Anderson; his eight grandchildren, Siri (Jacob), Tyler, Max, Ian (Jessica), Laura, Sandy (Rob), Peter and Matthew; and his three great-grandchildren, Ezra, Adelise, and Zulema.

Theodore George Koerner III - Obituary

BARRINGTON - Theodore George Koerner, III, 86, was born July 7, 1932 in the Chicago area, to Theodore George Koerner II and Claire (nee Overheu) Koerner. With family by his side, he passed from this world into heaven, on Monday, March 4, 2019, in Barrington.

With a History Major, Mr. Koerner was a proud graduate of Princeton University, class of 1954. After attending University of Michigan Law School for one year, he left to enlist in the United States Army. He proudly served as an officer in Korea for 2 years and returned to the University of Michigan to complete his Juris Doctor of Law.

Upon passing his Bar, Ted was admitted and qualified as an "Attorney of the United States Court of Military Appeals." Mr. Koerner was also duly admitted and qualified to practice as an Attorney and Counselor at Law in both the "Supreme Courts of Illinois," and the "Supreme Court of the United States." Mr. Koerner practiced Real Estate Law, Trust Law, and Tax Law both at Koerner and Koerner Real Estate, and as a sole proprietor.

Ted and Donalda met while active in the Barrington Area real estate community. They got married shortly after meeting. They both had many friends, and enjoyed entertaining. Ted and Donalda hosted many family events and holidays, which were always joyous times. Ted was a wonderful cook and shared his meals with family and friends. His Oktoberfest feasts of sauerbraten, braised red cabbage and gingersnap gravy were fan favorites, and rivaled the best restaurants around. Both Ted and Donnie were avid gardeners, literally growing everything from asparagus, potatoes, every pepper and squash known to man, and every tomato hybrid that ever existed. After spending summer days with their kids and grandchildren at the pool, we would dine on homemade potato salad, gazpacho, "Ted's Famous Cheesy Potatoes," numerous vegetables, and of course, some steaks on the grill, followed by homemade peach ice cream! Wonderful, carefree, summer memories.

Ted and Donnie loved spending two months in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico every year. Ted loved politics, movies, books, New York Times Crossword Puzzles, MASH (TV show), and anything and everything our mother loved.

He was unbeatable at "Trivial Pursuit," and we were all humbled far too many times. Ted was funny, smart, kind, NOT neat at all, loving, generous, thoughtful, and ALWAYS HAPPY! As he got older, he enjoyed listening to Frank Sinatra. He will be dearly missed and always loved.

He has joined his parents and the love of his life, Donalda, in eternal life. Ted is survived by his five stepchildren, Paul Anderson, Robin (Thomas) Mahaffey, Christina (David) Anderson, Glen (Suyapa) Anderson, and Kirk Anderson; his eight grandchildren, Siri (Jacob), Tyler, Max, Ian (Jessica), Laura, Sandy (Rob), Peter and Matthew; his three great-grandchildren, Ezra, Adelise, and Zulema. He is also survived by his sister, Sarah (Marvin) Peterson; and his two nieces, Julia and Jessica. Jay E. Helme - Obituary

Jay Ely Helme of Cape Coral, Florida and Middletown, Rhode Island, beloved husband, father and grandfather passed away on January 21, 2019 at 87 years of age.

Known to many as The Commodore, he was a larger than life presence full of love, good fellowship and good humor. Family was always his first priority, followed by friends, community and country. Generous to a fault, he shared the selfless values and integrity of the Greatest Generation - his word was his bond. An incredibly well-read man, he could converse on almost any topic and offer valuable advice on many. He enjoyed following all sorts of sports, but was most passionate about football - especially when it concerned the New England Patriots and his alma mater, Princeton.

Jay was born in Chestnut Hill, PA to George W. Helme II and Dorothy Ely Helme on June 8, 1931. He graduated from The Penn Charter School in 1950 and went on to earn a degree in economics from Princeton University. He enlisted in the US Army through the ROTC program at Princeton and proudly served at Fort Sill, OK following his graduation. Jay was active in the reserves for several years, closing out his service with an honorable discharge as First Lieutenant, Artillery in 1964.

Jay met the love of his life, Mary Bonnage, known as "Bonnie," while they were both in high school. They were married on August 7, 1952. While raising their four children, Jay and Bonnie divided their time between Apple Lane Farm in Paoli, PA and the family home on Dering Harbor in Shelter Island Heights, NY. They moved to Shelter Island year-round after Jay became an independent consultant, and later spent several happy years in Newport, RI before building their dream home in Cape Coral, FL. In recent years they enjoyed summers in Rhode Island while escaping the cold in Cape Coral during the winter months.

Jay's distinguished professional career began in marketing and consulting with the firm of Alderson and Sessions in Philadelphia. A health care project which he worked on at Alderson & Sessions led to his being named Executive Director of a new regional hospital and health care facilities advisory agency, the Hospital Survey Committee. The Hospital Survey Committee was a private, non-profit corporation which was active in shaping health care facility development in the Greater Philadelphia area. Health care planning and consulting became Jay's specialty.

He went on to found sister companies Medicon Inc. and Third Age Inc., serving as Chairman and President of both. Medicon provided general health care consulting services, and Third Age specialized in assisted living and retirement facilities. After Jay and Bonnie decided to move to Shelter Island full-time, he created an independent consultancy called Helme Associates and continued to serve clients such as Kessler Rehabilitation Center, Southampton Hospital and Newport Hospital well into his 70's. He left a valuable and lasting legacy of improvements at many of the hospital and health care institutions he worked with.

Jay loved the salt water and was very proud to be a lifelong member of the Shelter Island Yacht Club. He was a flag officer and trustee for many years, serving as Commodore in 1970-71. He helped run the Club's 85th anniversary and 100th anniversary regattas, and led the club through the acquisition of the adjoining Bull property in the 1970s. In his younger days Jay raced a Star with his brother George, and in later years he sailed a Bristol 34 called Typhoon. Jay was extremely proud and grateful that the SIYC created the Helme Trophy in 1999 to honor his and Bonnie's contributions over the years. Most recently he was an avid supporter of Shelter Island's Resolute Cup team and SIYC sailors representing the club in everything from the Olympics to the Sydney-Hobart Race (Australia). At the time of his passing he was SIYC Member Number 1. He was also a past member of the New York Yacht Club and the Ida Lewis Yacht Club.

His dedication to Shelter Island extended beyond the Yacht Club to the community of Shelter Island Heights. In 1979 he spearheaded the incorporation of the Heights as a non-profit homeowners' association known as the Shelter Island Heights Property Owners Corporation to ensure that the community would maintain control of its own destiny and hold onto ownership of the North Ferry Company. He served as the POC's first Chairman from 1979-1986 and was also on the board of the Ferry Company for many years.

Jay is survived by his wife of 67 years Bonnie (nee Mary Elizabeth Snowden Bonnage) and his children: Sally Helme of Middletown RI, Suzy Helme of West Chester PA, Sandy and her husband Gregg Griffin of Southampton NY, and Skip and his wife Nancy Helme of Newport RI. He is also survived by his six grandchildren: Gregg Griffin Jr. of Newport RI, Elizabeth Bowden of Southampton NY, Hayley Bowden of Malvern PA, Morgan Helme of Newport RI, Reese Bowden and Henry Helme also of Newport. His faithful labrador Wren was his constant companion. A celebration of his life is planned for June 14th, 2019 in Shelter Island, New York. In lieu of flowers, the family suggests that donations be made to the Union Chapel in the Grove, P.O. Box 326, Shelter Island Heights, NY 11965.

Edward H. Breisacher Jr. — Memorial Note

Ed died after a long battle with multiple myeloma and dementia on December 3, 2018.

Prepared at Penn Charter School, he was active in baseball, publications, and glee club.

An English major at Princeton, he wrote his senior thesis on Lord Byron, was a member of Cannon Club, and participated in Roy Heath's Advisee Project. He developed a lifelong passion for competitive swimming starting in his freshman year, eventually captaining the team in his senior year.

After military service in Germany, and periods of teaching, study in Germany, travel in the Middle East, editing college textbooks, and earning an MBA, he co-founded and directed the Darwin Press, specializing in scholarly works on the Middle East and science. Darwin also published Princeton Retrospectives: Twenty-Fifth-Year Reflections on a College Education, Roy Heath's report of interviews of members of the Advisee Project and others from the Class of 1954.

Ed was a member of the USMS Princeton Area Masters workout group, treasurer of Friends of Princeton Swimming and Diving, and played a major role in developing support for building the DeNunzio Pool. He remained a competitive swimmer until his last years, achieving All-American status in 2007 in the 50 meter freestyle with the best time in his age group, and Top Ten ratings 21 times.

Ed also enjoyed singing in Gilbert and Sullivan productions and a church choir, and breeding golden retrievers.

He is survived by his son Eric.

Edward H. Breisacher Jr. - Obituary

Ed died Dec. 3, 2018, in Princeton, N.J. He was 86.

He grew up in Medford Lakes, N.J., and in 1950 graduated from Penn Charter School in Philadelphia, where he was active in baseball, publications, and glee club.

At Princeton Ed was a member of Cannon Club, majored in English, wrote his senior thesis on Lord Byron, and was chosen to participate in the Advisee Project — a study conducted by clinical psychologist Roy Heath '39 that documented the social and academic progress of 36 members of the Class of 1954 during their undergraduate careers through periodic interviews (<https://rbsc.princeton.edu/collections/roy-heath-class-1954-advisee-project-interviews>).

At Princeton Ed lettered all four years and captained the team his senior year, swimming under the legendary coach Howie Stepp and as a teammate of NCAA champion Robert Brawner '52. Ed's summers during college were very memorable for him as a waterfront director at Camp Tecumseh on Lake Winnepesaukee, N.H. A highlight of those summers was singing in the Gilbert & Sullivan operettas at the end of the camp season.

After Princeton Ed served as an Army artillery officer in Germany, taught at Episcopal Academy in Philadelphia, attended Freie Universitat in Berlin, and traveled throughout the Middle East. In 1969, while working as a college textbook editor, Ed earned an MBA in international marketing from NYU Stern School of Business.

In 1970 Ed became a co-founder and director of The Darwin Press in Pennington, N.J., which specialized in scholarly works on the Middle East (including late antiquity and Central Asia) and science (primarily biology and marine zoology). In recent years, Darwin Press published books of interest for friends including The Golden Retriever Puppy Handbook (2004) by R. Ann Johnson, Sea Time: Life on Board Supply and Troop Ships during World War II and Its Aftermath (2006) by William Haynes, Starboard at Midnight (2011) by Helen Behr Sanford, and My Other Life: A Combat Soldier in Vietnam (2016) by Richard Alexander.

In the 1970s Ed sang in several Gilbert & Sullivan operettas with students and faculty from Westminster Choir College and in the late 1980s with the All Saints' Church choir. Beginning in the 1990s Ed had the opportunity to be closely associated with Gold-Rush Goldens — breeding, whelping, and socializing golden retrievers.

In the 1960s Ed purchased the land and built his beloved lakeside cottage in eastern Ontario, Canada. He mostly spent time there in the summers, but also visited during the other seasons. For nearly 50 years Ed happily traveled back and forth between Princeton and Brule Lake.

Swimming also was a constant in Ed's life. Ed served as treasurer of the Friends of Princeton Swimming & Diving from 1976 to 1987. Together with his fellow officers — William Haynes '50, Hank Van Oss '39, and Sanford Thatcher '65 — Ed worked tirelessly for more than a decade to build the case for a new pool. Ralph DeNunzio '53 had no prior connection with the swimming program, but came forward with the offer of $3 million for an athletic facility. The groundbreaking for DeNunzio Pool took place in the spring of 1988 with the official dedication ceremony June 8, 1990.

For 42 years, beginning in 1974, Ed swam and lifeguarded for Princeton Area Masters, the USMS workout group founded by Tink Bolster (wife of Joseph Bolster Jr. '52) in 1971. William G. Van Pelt — Memorial Note Bill died from complications of Parkinsons on September 19, 2018.

He came to us from Groton, where he played football, rowed in the crew, and was active in dramatics. He majored in History, writing his senior thesis on "The History and Development of the Grenfell Mission", a philanthropic organization providing health care in Newfoundland and Labrador. He was a member of Colonial Club and belonged to the Canterbury Society.

In the early years of his young adulthood Bill taught his passion in history to young men at the Brooks School, in North Andover, Massachusetts, but returned to his early home in the Philadelphia area to begin a career as a market research analyst. Occupations changed throughout his life, leading him to owning a house-painting franchise in Barrington, Rhode Island and later a coffee/snack catering and vending business in Lancaster, PA.

An avid and accomplished sailor all his life, he spent summers in North East Harbor on Mount Desert Island, and in Blue Hill, ME. He was never without a dog, or several, and rarely without a camera.

Bill is survived by three children, three step-children, five grandchildren, and numerous step-grandchildren.

William Van Pelt — Obituary

William Grant Van Pelt of Haverford, PA aged 86 passed away from complications of Parkinson's at about noon on September 19, 2018.

He lived most of his life as a resident of the Main Line outside of Philadelphia, PA, having been born to Marian Grant Van Pelt and John L. Van Pelt in 1931 on Edgehill Road in Wayne Pa, the first born son and fourth child after three older sisters, Jane(d), Ellen, and Marian aka Polly(d.).

He attended Episcopal Academy, until he went to Groton Academy in 1944, from which he graduated in 1950. He continued on to graduate from Princeton in 1954 with a BA in history.

In the early years of his young adulthood he married and taught his passion in history to young men at the Brooks School, in North Andover, Massachusetts. With a burgeoning young family and requisite three dogs, he returned to the Philadelphia area to begin a career as a market research analyst. An avid and accomplished sailor all his life he spent his earliest summers in North East Harbor on Mount Desert Island, ME at his family's beloved cottage, Delights. Once married he found it necessary to change alliances and became a regular summer vacationer in Blue Hill, Maine where his wife's family had long summered.

Marriages and occupations changed throughout his life, leading him to owning a house-painting franchise in Barrington, Rhode Island and later a coffee/snack catering and vending business in Lancaster, PA. He was never without a dog, or several, and rarely without a camera.

Once settled back in Berwyn, PA after Rhode Island, he reconnected with Saint David's Church and joined the choir, became an altar person and eventually joined the vestry. The friends he made in these groups are very dear to him, and he treasured these relationships for the rest of his life.

Ever the historian, he enjoyed reminding his children that his great-grandfather was the Reverend Peter Van Pelt of Christ Church in Philadelphia, who served his flock during the Civil War. Moreover, in the later years of his life he encouraged the research that led to learning that his earliest ancestor to settle in the US may have been Tunis Van Pelt, a farmer of Staten Island, who settled in New Amsterdam around 1638. He used to always like to say that you could follow the Van Pelt family history from Staten Island through the cemeteries of New Jersey from north to south because there is a member of the Van Pelt family buried in every one.

William is survived by his sister Ellen Wells, brother John C, children Alida Van Pelt, Ellen Jordan, William Van Pelt Jr., step children John Royer, Alison Royer

Andrew L. Steigman — Memorial Note

Andy Steigman died of complications from a stroke on September 7, 2018.

At Princeton, he was Vice President of Prospect Club, majored in the Woodrow Wilson School, and received a Summer Scholarship for study abroad. Writing his senior thesis on "British Relations with China, 1945-53", he graduated summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa.

studies at American University. He held foreign posts in the Congo, Libya, France, and Nigeria, and ultimately served as Ambassador to Gabon and to Sao Tome and Principe. He also held Africa-related assignments in the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research and the Bureau of African Affairs. Other assignments included a Congressional Fellowship on Capitol Hill, staff assistant to Secretary Dean Rusk, a term on loan to the Director of Intelligence, and Deputy Assistant Secretary of Personnel.

His service as Diplomat in Residence at Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service led to his appointment as Associate Dean, where he spent the next 33 years teaching as a knowledgeable and enthusiastic academic advisor.

Andy's wife, Meryl, who lent essential diplomatic if unofficial support at all his posts, died in 2017. He is survived by his daughter Dania, son Jonathan, and one grandson.

Andrew L. Steigman — Obituary

Distinguished diplomat and educator Andrew Steigman died in Washington, DC, on September 7, 2018.

Ambassador Steigman graduated from Princeton University, Summa Cum Laude and Phi Beta Kappa in 1954, majoring in international affairs. He then spent a year at the London School of Economics where he concentrated his studies on Africa. In 1956 he joined the U.S. Army, serving in Germany until entering the Foreign Service in 1958.

Pursuing a long-held fascination with Africa, he was able to get a first assignment working on North Africa in State's Bureau of Intelligence and Research. Two years later he was assigned to Leopoldville/Kinshasa, Democratic Republic of Congo, before transferring to Benghazi, Libya, where he served as principal officer.

In 1964, Ambassador Steigman returned to Washington where he worked in the State Department for five years, initially in the Bureau of African Affairs. He also spent a year as a Congressional Fellow on Capitol Hill. In 1966, he was selected to be the staff assistant to Secretary Dean Rusk, an important policy position focusing much of the time on U.S. involvement in the Vietnam War.

He next was posted in the American Embassy in Paris as a political officer handling African and Middle Eastern issues. With his excellent command of French, he developed especially productive relations with the French Foreign Ministry, resulting in significant bilateral approaches to African governments where the French had considerable influence.

Then back to Africa, where Andrew Steigman spent three years as political counselor in Nigeria. The U.S. President then sent him as Ambassador to Gabon and to Sao Tome and Principe (a former Portuguese colony). In Gabon, Ambassador Steigman managed a modest economic program and kept in close contact with the French ambassador who had a contingent of French troops on call.

After two years in Gabon, Ambassador Steigman returned to Washington, where he spent two years on loan to the Director of Intelligence, served as deputy assistant secretary for personnel, and served as Diplomat-in-Residence at Georgetown University's Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service. This led to his being named Associate Dean at the School of Foreign Service.

Dean Steigman will be remembered by thousands of graduates. From 1985-2018 he served as a knowledgeable and enthusiastic academic advisor. He provided storied career guidance, particularly to students interested in a career in diplomacy. He also offered a very popular course in negotiations. Graduates still mention how much it meant to them when Dean Steigman rhythmically announced their names as they crossed the stage at graduation.

He was accompanied at each post by his wife Meryl, who shared his proficiency in French and unofficially but skillfully supplemented the outreach which he made in each of his diplomatic missions.

A. Bliss McCrum — Memorial Note

Bliss died June 6, 2018 after years of coping with Parkinson's with his characteristic zest for life.

He came to us from Culver Military Academy and majored in History. One of the most beloved members of the class, he served as President of Cottage Club and later as President of the Class. He enjoyed rowing in crew, ultimately in the Henley Regatta. Following military service he earned an MBA from the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania.

In 1981 he married cardiologist Marcia Bull.

With success as a venture capitalist, and guided by his motto "learn, earn, and return", he supported numerous philanthropic enterprises in New Canaan, CT including Horizons, a program for education of underprivileged children, housing for senior citizens, and the McCrum Fund to help other nonprofits. His philanthropy continued after he retired to a ranch in Livingston Montana to raise alfalfa.

He loved fly fishing and upland game bird hunting, which he pursued until Parkinson's disease prevented it. He also enjoyed country music, which he played and "plinked" on his guitar and banjo.

Bliss coped with his illness gracefully and never complained. When asked how he was feeling, his usual reply was, "never better."

He is survived by his wife Marcia; daughters Hanna, Lindsay, Elizabeth, and Kate and sons Arlington (Bo) and William from his previous marriage to Jean Palmer; step-children Kenneth, Laura, and Bradford; 15 grandchildren and two nephews.

Bliss McCrum (Obituary) On June 6th, 2018, the world lost a remarkable man, Arlington Bliss McCrum, Jr.

Bliss was born on June 2, 1932 to Arlington Bliss McCrum, Sr. and Madeline Broderick McCrum in Charleston, West Virginia. He died peacefully at home in Livingston after a long, courageous battle with Parkinson's Disease, surrounded by his loving family.

He graduated from Culver Academy in 1950 and from Princeton University in 1954, where he majored in History and had the pleasure of rowing crew, ultimately in the Henley Regatta in England. He was President of Cottage Club and later President of his Class.

Following college, he married Jean Palmer of Cleveland, Ohio and Blue Hill, Maine. He served our country as a Lieutenant in the U.S. Army in peacekeeping in Germany. Upon his return he obtained an MBA from the Wharton School in 1958. He began his career in finance working at the firm of Dominick and Dominick, from which he moved on to be a founding partner of Euclid Partners, a venture capital firm in New York City. He was a member of the Princeton Club and the Lynx Club there. On the home front, he moved to Connecticut where he and Jean raised six children, until divorcing in 1979.

He then met and married, in 1981, cardiologist Dr. Marcia B. Bull who brought three more children to the family. They resided in New Canaan, Connecticut where he was instrumental in founding the highly successful Horizons program, fostering middle and high school education of underprivileged children from nearby communities. He served on the board of directors at Horizons for several years. Also in New Canaan, he helped found and was on the board of the New Canaan Inn, a residence for senior citizens. In addition, he participated in fundraising for other local nonprofit organizations. His motto was "learn, earn, and return." He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, the Country Club of New Canaan, the Verbank Hunting Club, and the Saugatuck Shores Club. He served on the board of the New Canaan Country School, and established the McCrum Fund, to help other nonprofits.

In 2004 after retiring, Bliss and Marcia moved to live full time in Livingston, Montana, raising alfalfa on their small ranch ("Mac Ranch"). He continued his philanthropic support of local organizations, such as the Food Resource Center, the Park County Community Foundation, the building of the Livingston Health Care Center, the Shane Center and educational programs for the Livingston school system, among others. He and Marcia had taken family vacations in Montana and Wyoming, following their love of nature and Bliss' passions of fly fishing and upland game bird hunting, interests he pursued until Parkinson's disease made it impossible for him to do so. Even then he enjoyed working in the field with his two English Setters Bea and Pearl.

Bliss loved meeting and interacting with people and many will remember his warm smile, easy humor, and twinkling blue eyes even when confined to a wheelchair. He loved his family dearly, and derived great pleasure from country music, which he played and ultimately "plinked" on his guitar and banjo. He epitomized grit, courage and determination in fighting his illness and, remarkably, never complained. When asked how he was feeling, his usual reply was, "never better." His zest for life was indomitable.

He was predeceased by his parents, his sister, Sarah McCrum Porter and her husband Richard Porter. He is survived by his loving wife, Marcia; daughters, Hanna McCrum Henderson (Kris), Lindsay McCrum, Elizabeth McCrum, and Kate McCrum; sons, Arlington B. McCrum III (Barbara) and William McCrum; step-children, Kenneth Bull, Laura Bull Bailey (Michael), and Bradford Bull (Reba); 15 grandchildren and two nephews, Ned (Karon) and John Porter. Memorial celebrations of his life are being planned for the fall in Livingston and Connecticut. H. Ganse "Binks" Little, Jr. — Memorial note Binks died on March 14, 2018 after a long illness.

After preparation at Deerfield, he majored in English under the American Civilization Program, writing his thesis on "Nathaniel Hawthorne: the Heart, Sin, Expiation," presaging his career as scholar and teacher of religion. He joined Tiger Inn, continued his long enjoyment of basketball and golf, served on the Student Christian Association Committee for 100% Bicker, and was active in campus religious affairs.

Following a year of theological study in Edinburgh, Binks earned a Bachelor of Divinity degree at Princeton Theological Seminary and a Ph.D. at Harvard in Social Relations and the History and Philosophy of Religion.

After teaching for two years at Wilson College in Chambersburg, PA, he embarked on a distinguished career as teacher and pioneering administrator at Williams College not only in the Department of Religion, of which he was chair for 20 years, but throughout and beyond the institution, serving as managing editor of the American Academy of Religion Dissertation Series.

Binks and Susan spent summers in Wellfleet, MA on Cape Cod. Binks loved the outer Cape landscape.

H. Ganse "Binks" Little — Obituary (based principally on a Tribute from Williams College)

H. Ganse "Binks" Little, died on March 14 in Charlottesville, Va. He was 85.

Born in St. Louis, Mo., in 1932, Binks grew up in Columbus, Ohio, and Pasadena, Calif, and attended Deerfield Academy. After graduation from Princeton in 1954 he earned a B.D. from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1957, having spent the 1954-55 academic year at the University of Edinburgh. He earned a Ph.D. from Harvard in 1965.

Binks devoted much of his life to the study and teaching of religion. He taught at Williams College from 1963 to 1997, and held the position of Cluett Professor of Religion at Williams College at his retirement. Before coming to Williams, he taught religion at Wilson College in Chambersburg, Pa., and served as a teaching assistant at Harvard, where he earned his Ph.D.

At Williams, he contributed greatly to the life of the college, both inside and outside the classroom. In the 20 years during which he chaired the Department of Religion, starting in 1967, rapid growth of departmental enrollments, followed by new faculty appointments, set the stage for the development of an exciting and rigorous introductory religion course that was both highly popular at Williams and emulated nationally.

An intellectual who cared deeply about his students, Binks was intensely curious about developments in the full range of liberal arts disciplines. "Almost immediately following his faculty appointment in the Department of Religion, it became apparent that Binks Little had the potential to become a significant leader in his department and in the college generally," says John Chandler, Williams president, emeritus, who served as dean of the faculty and religion department chair when Binks joined Williams.

Binks was also the first-ever chair of the Committee of Undergraduate Life when it was conceived in the late 1960s. Under his leadership, the committee recommended and the college implemented major revisions of protocols governing residential life. He also paved the way for student membership on standing committees that, up until then, were strictly composed of faculty. "Binks had a great memory for students and a complete devotion to them," says Mark C. Taylor, Cluett Professor of Humanities, emeritus.

Binks became a full professor in 1974. That year he was appointed the managing editor of the American Academy of Religion Dissertation Series, a publishing venture organized to make outstanding doctoral research in the study of religion readily available to the wider scholarly community.

Shortly before he retired from Williams, Binks participated for two years in an experimental faculty development program, mentoring second-year faculty across the academic divisions and coordinating and directing periodic seminars and conferences that addressed the myriad challenges faced by new faculty members.

Binks is survived by Susan, his wife of 60 years, his sons William (Susan), Thomas (Surya), and Michael (Keerthi), and his grandsons Case, Quinn, Nicholas, Jalen, Eno, and Kiran.

A burial and memorial service for H. Ganse Little, Jr. will be held in Williamstown, MA on Saturday, August 25.

Binks and Susan spent summers in Wellfleet, MA on Cape Cod. Given Binks' love of the outer Cape landscape, please consider donating to the Friends of the Herring River in Wellfleet in his name: <http://www.friendsofherringriver.org/>

John T. Wainwright — (Memorial Note)

Jack "Gator" Wainwright died February 2, 2018 after some years with Parkinson's-Like Syndrome. He came to us from St. Paul's School (NH), took his two-year military duty between his sophomore and junior years ("to my good fortune...allowing a heightened experience of all that Princeton offers" he later declared), majored in politics, joined Elm Club, and graduated with honors in the Class of 1957.

With a law degree from the University of Virginia, he worked for the presidential campaigns of both John F. and, later, Robert Kennedy. He held positions with the Department of State, the Agency for International Development, and as consultant to the International Relations Committee of the U.S. House of Representatives. He was admitted to practice law before the courts of the District of Columbia and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. In this capacity he specialized in the application of international law to matters relating to economic development, the release of prisoners of war, and the relief of political detainees, including some Americans held in Cuban prisons. (Ironically, his father had died in Cuban waters eight months before his birth while trying to rescue the Consul to the U.S. Consulate in Havana and his wife who had been swept away by a wave in Matanza Bay.)

Jack married Catherine ("Kitty") in 1988. They were adventurous world travelers and he was an avid bird-watcher. Until five days before his death he would fall asleep with either a bird book, a history book, or a book of poetry in his hands.

The class extends its condolences to Catherine, his sons Andrew and Peter, and to his three grandchildren.

Tony taught courses primarily in Frostburg's graduate counseling psychology program and developed the undergraduate internship. Students saw him as demanding the best of them and being masterful in his presentation of various theories and techniques. Tony had many passions. He was a voracious reader and his tastes ranged from speculative fiction to history and philosophy. His travels always included visits to bookstores to search for some desired book. He was an avid fan of Penn State football and the New York Yankees. He will miss seeing how Stanton contributes to the Yankees this season. His devotion to animals was touching. For Tony, no house was a home without a couple of cats. He is survived by his cats Tigger, Smoke, and his dog Rikki.

He lived with Alzheimer's for more than eight years. He was fortunate to spend the last 6 months of his life residing at Rest Assured in Meyersdale, PA. One cannot find a better care facility for the staff of Rest Assured are extraordinarily caring and patient.

A celebration of Tony's life will be held on the Frostburg State University Campus early Spring 2018.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that contributions be made to the Frostburg State University Foundation, Inc., 101 Braddock Rd., and Frostburg MD 21532 in his memory for the Anthony M. Lo Giudice scholarship.

M. Grant Gross, Jr. (Memorial Note)

Grant Gross died on December 17, 2017. A graduate of Amarillo (TX) High School, he majored in geology, joined Quadrangle Club, and was active in Orange Key and the Student Christian Association. He was President of the Debate Panel and Vice-president of Whig Clio.

Grant went on to a distinguished career in oceanography after service in the Army, a Fulbright in Holland to study marine geology, and a Ph.D. in marine geology at the California Institute of Technology.

His interest in oceanography arose while teaching it at the University of Washington, where he became Associate Professor, followed by major appointments at the Smithsonian Institute, the State University of New York at Stony Brook, The National Science Foundation, the Chesapeake Bay Institute at Johns Hopkins, and the Division of Ocean Sciences at the National Science Foundation, from which he retired in 1994.

Grant was recognized for his expertise in marine geochemistry, sedimentary processes in coastal waters, and waste disposal from urban areas. A colleague characterized him as "quiet, egalitarian, fair and good at getting a consensus, a steady hand at the helm, and instrumental in advancing ocean science in the U.S."

He is survived by his wife Elizabeth, a son Jeffrey, two daughters — Alison (Gross) Gilbert, Anne (Gross) Hamel '86 (married to Warren Hamel '82), 10 grandchildren (including Luke '16 and Jacob Hamel '18), two great-grandchildren, and a sister.

M. Grant Gross (Obituary)

Grant Gross Jr., a retired oceanographer and former director of the Chesapeake Bay Institute, died Dec. 17 at the Heron Point retirement community in Chestertown of heart disease. The former longtime resident of the city's Tuscany-Canterbury neighborhood was 84.

Dr. Gross' expertise was in the fields of marine geochemistry, sedimentary processes in coastal waters and waste disposal from urban areas. "Grant was a steady hand at the helm when it came to ocean science," said Dr. Michael J. Roman of Easton, a professor and director of the Horn Point Laboratory in Cambridge, part of the University of Maryland Center for Environmental Science. He said Mr. Gross was "instrumental in advancing ocean science in the U.S. He was cutting edge, and a fixture at the times. He also worked hard at getting minorities into oceanography. He was all about inclusiveness."

The son of Meredith Grant Gross Sr., an insurance salesman and Linotype operator, and Mary Stevens Gross, a secretary, Meredith Grant Gross Jr. was born in Childress, Texas, and raised in Amarillo. He graduated from Amarillo High School. A 1954 graduate of Princeton University, he studied for a year at the Delft University of Technology in Holland on a Fulbright Fellowship. After serving in the Army, he obtained both a master's degree in 1958 and doctorate in marine geology in 1961 from the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

It was while teaching at the University of Washington that Dr. Gross backed into the field of oceanography. "At Princeton, he had written a paper on the limestone of Bermuda, and when he went to the University of Washington, they told him he was teaching a new course on oceanography. That's what got him going," said his wife of 26 years, the former Dr. Elizabeth R. "Liz" Bulleid, an oceanographer and former director of the Scientific Committee on Oceanic Research.

From 1961 to 1968, he was associate professor of oceanography at the University of Washington in Seattle, and from 1966 to 1968 was associate curator of sedimentology at the Smithsonian Institute. In 1968, he joined the faculty of the State University of New York at Stony Brook as professor of oceanography. He left in 1972 to join the staff of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. He was head of the oceanographic section of the National Science Foundation from 1973 to 1974, then became director of the Chesapeake Bay Institute at Johns Hopkins University. He was later director of the Division of Ocean Sciences at the National Science Foundation, from 1980 until retiring in 1994.

After retiring, he served as executive director of the Chesapeake Research Consortium from 1994 to 2001, and was a lecturer in oceanography at Washington College from 1999 until 2001. He also was an adjunct professor at the University of Maryland, College Park, and the founding director of the Center for the Environment and Society at Washington College.

He was author of a college-level textbook, "Principles of Oceanography" and co-author of another with his wife, "Oceanography: A View of the Earth." He also wrote several others books, including "The Ocean World," "Waste Disposal," and "Ocean Dumping and Marine Pollution: Geological Aspects of Waste Disposal."

"He was very well liked and he always liked to get your opinion. He was very egalitarian, fair and good at getting a consensus," Dr. Roman said. "Grant was a very quiet and not a domineering person. He was self-assured and was a confident person. He brought out the best in people."

Dr. Gross was a Chestertown resident since 1999. His hobby was the weather. "He was a longtime weather geek," his wife said. "He enjoyed tracking the weather and if family and friends were planning an outdoor event, they'd call Grant to find if there were any storms were coming, and if there were, when were they going to hit."

Dr. Gross was a member of Shrewsbury Parish Episcopal Church in Kennedyville, where plans for a memorial service in March are incomplete.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by a son, Jeffrey G. Gross of Magnolia, Texas; two daughters, E. Anne Hamel of Arnold and Alison Gilbert of Portland, Ore.; a sister, Marianna Ekelund of Claremont, Calif.; 10 grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Charles Millard (Memorial Note)

Charlie died at his Chapel Hill home on December 11th, attended by friends.

He came to Princeton from the Nichols School in Buffalo, NY. He majored in Art, joined Charter Club, and was active in Triangle, Orange Key, Freshman Crew, participated in Roy Heath's Advisee Project, and graduated magna cum laude.

After service in the Navy, he earned a Ph.D. in Fine Arts in 1971. Charlie held major curatorial positions at the Los Angeles County Museum and at the Hirschhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden in Washington before becoming Director of the Ackland Art Museum at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. There he securely tied the Ackland's mission to university teaching. He invited students to museum events and began a steady public outreach that included local children. Millard described the seven years heading the Ackland as his happiest.

The sale of a priceless but unrecognized sculpture which he had serendipitously purchased for a pittance enabled him to establish the Tyche Foundation, from which much of Ackland's collection was founded. Charlie's modesty masked a deep wit, a true gift for friendship. He is remembered as a connoisseur and patron whose acuity and generosity has benefited cultural institutions across the country.

Charles Millard (Obituary)

Respected museum director and leading expert in 19th Century French sculpture, Charles Millard has died at the age of eighty-four. Millard's 1976 book, "The Sculpture of Edgar Degas," remains the definitive work on the subject.

As a graceful and wide-ranging essayist, as a curator with expertise in photography, ceramics and sculpture, Millard leaves a legacy of elegant, restless intellectual exploration. His clarion prose is underwritten by impeccable citizenship and personal generosity. Millard's modesty masked a deep wit, a true gift for friendship. If his home collection embraced everything from Color Field painting to Chinese antiquities to North Carolina folk pottery, his circle of acquaintances showed just such strength in variety. Over the years he revisited the studios of many artists usually wary of art historians. Those trusting friends included artistic pioneers like Helen Frankenthaler, Carl Chiarenza, Anthony Caro, George Nick, Jules Olitski, Kenneth Noland and Mark Hewitt.

Born in Elizabeth, NJ on December 20, 1932, Millard graduated "magna cum laude" from Princeton in 1954. From 1956-1959 he served in the US Navy as a staff member at headquarters of the Atlantic Fleet and the Sixth Fleet. Harvard awarded him a Ph.D. in Fine Arts in 1971. He worked as Curator of Nineteenth Century Art at the Los Angeles County Museum (1971-1974) before becoming Chief Curator of the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden (1973-1986). From 1986-1993 he made a memorable Director of the Ackland Art Museum at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. (In 2015, the University would award him an Honorary Doctorate of Fine Arts.) Millard securely tied the Ackland's mission to university teaching. He invited students to museum events and began a steady public outreach that included local children. Millard described the seven years heading the Ackland as his happiest.

If his quiet service intended to go unnoticed, his benefactions could not be hidden. While living in Los Angeles, Millard had bought for himself a misattributed sculpture, the life-sized bust of a wildly grimacing man. The piece costs just two hundred dollars and, for decades, it served as a front hall hat rack. Of course Millard had recognized it as the carving of a German eccentric, Franz Xaver Messerschmidt (1739-1783). When a similar bust by the artist sold for millions in 2010, Charles Millard concocted The Tyche

Foundation. He named it, not for himself, but in honor of the Roman goddess of good fortune and lucky finds. With the sale's windfall, Charles Millard at once set about strengthening the Ackland's considerable art holdings. Whatever thinness he had found in the collection, Millard could now buttress from within. A year later, the one carved gargoye had become eighty works - in all forms and from most centuries. The exhibit of donated works was titled "Fortune Smiles." It filled the entire Ackland Museum. The Tyche collection, being self-generated and hand- shaped, is a gift both loving and personal. And, only incidentally, almost by accident, it leaves the most perfect portrait of its donor.

Charles Millard died at his Chapel Hill home on December 11th, attended by friends. In lieu of flowers, tributes may be sent to his favorite cause: The Ackland Art Museum Building Fund, 101 South Columbia Street, Chapel Hill, NC 27599.

John R. Skvarla

John died on September 3, 2016. He came to Princeton from Turtle Creek High in Turtle Creek, PA. He majored in Chemical Engineering and was a member of Charter Club. He participated in Varsity Swimming in all four years, and served as a research assistant and as a Captain in the University Dining Halls.

After Princeton, he earned an M.S. in Chemical Engineering at the Carnegie Institute of Technology and worked for the Esso Standard Oil Company. In our tenth yearbook, he reported that his specialty was Refinery Economics, primarily in long range refinery planning and investment studies. He enjoyed overseas operations in particular. By our 50th reunion, he had retired and was enjoying skiing, hiking and other outdoor activities. He is survived by his wife Sharon and three daughters by a previous marriage — Leslie, Diana, and Lauren.

Class sends condolences to his family.

George D. Cope, Jr.

George Cope died on October 2, 2017 of stage 4 lung cancer, a diagnosis he received in early February. He chose to forgo chemotherapy, and had a very good last chapter, enjoying friends and family through September, passing quietly and without pain.

George came to Princeton from Episcopal High in Savannah, GA, and majored in Modern Languages. After Princeton, George pursued Comparative Languages study at Harvard, and was then drafted into the Army, serving in Germany. At the end of his service, he remained in Germany to learn film and photography, a career he enjoyed and in which he excelled. Based in Boston, his studio created anthropological films from the Arctic to East Africa, and scientific photography for the faculties of Harvard and MIT. He sold the business in 1978 and then worked for Digital Equipment Corporation, producing educational videos, one of which won the Palme d'Or. In retirement, he wrote "I am trying to reinvent myself as a novelist... an experience both exciting and humbling... finding myself, at age 70, no more than a clumsy beginner." He is survived by his wife, Marsha, son Jonathan B. Cope '98, who is married to Carolyn Gratzner Cope, also '98 and two grand-daughters.

James W. Brown, Jr.

Jim died on November 20, 2017. He graduated from Shaker Heights High School, Ohio, and majored in Chemical Engineering. He was a member of Tiger Inn and was active in the Cleveland Club. He transferred to M.I.T. in his junior year so he could marry his high school sweetheart, Constance Wright. At M.I.T. he was a member of the national honorary society TauBeta Pi.

As a fighter pilot in the Navy Jim qualified for all-weather, night landing on aircraft carriers, and remained an avid pilot thereafter. He enjoyed a successful business career, including tenure at SOHIO, culminating in the business joy of his life: the ownership and leadership of Hartzell Propeller Inc., the world's leading and oldest airplane propeller company. He enjoyed mentoring dozens of people. Two of Jim's favorite sayings were: 1) Break A Rule Every Day; and 2) Heed the 11th Commandment: Thou Shalt Go For it. He often said "I am the luckiest man in the world." He is survived by his wife of 65 years, Constance W. Brown, six children, sixteen grandchildren, and three great grandchildren.

Frederic T. C. Brewer IV

Fred Brewer died on October 3, 2017. He graduated from Newark Academy in Montclair, NJ, where he excelled in academics and football. His curiosity for learning how things work and, in particular, in things electronic began early (building a television set and a Geiger counter in his teens) and continued at Princeton, where he majored in electrical engineering. He was a member of Cloister Inn. With his entrepreneurial talent, Fred persuaded the owner of The Princeton Music Center in Palmer Square to let him repair radios and phonographs in the basement. By the end of his junior year, he owned the store and began to sell high-fidelity equipment and install it in homes.

After graduation, Fred was commissioned in the U.S. Navy, earned his wings, and served as a flight instructor at Pensacola, where he met his wife Mary. After service, he enjoyed a successful career with his forward thinking and innovative ideas. He revolutionized more than a few different industries, and owned several radio stations in the Pensacola area.

Preceded death by his wife, Fred is survived by four children, ten grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren.

The class sends his condolences and honors his service.

Robert L. deZafra — Memorial Note

Bob de Zafra was in active good health until his death of complications following otherwise successful knee surgery on October 10, 2017. He prepared for Princeton at New Milford High School (CT). Majoring in Physics, he was a member of Prospect Club, Treasurer of the Outing Club, participated in the Creative Sculpturing Program, and served as Research Assistant to Professor Joe Brown.

Bob earned a Ph.D. in Physics at the University of Maryland in 1958. As Professor of Physics at the State University of New York at Stony Brook he developed methods for detection of stratospheric trace gases, and is credited with discovering the man-made source of the hazardous depletion of the ozone layer. The de Zafra Ridge in Antarctica was named in his honor.

In retirement, he confessed to a 50-year addiction to historic preservation, personally restoring three old houses dating from the 18th and 19th centuries. He was a founder and served as secretary of Three Villages Community Trust in Setauket (NY) which undertakes the restoration and adaptive re-use of historical sites and structures. Bob was also active in contemporary community development, serving on the Stony Brook Safety, Beautification, and Improvement Planning Committee.

The Class extends condolences to his wife, Julia, four nieces and a nephew.

Robert de Zafra - Obituary

Robert L. de Zafra, a physicist who helped confirm that the chemicals in some aerosols and refrigerants were responsible for the expanding ozone hole over Antarctica, died on Oct. 10 in Stony Brook, N.Y. He was 85.

Dorothea de Zafra Atwell, a niece, said the cause was respiratory complications after surgery.

Dr. de Zafra, who taught at Stony Brook University for 38 years and lived in Setauket, on the North Shore of Long Island, contributed research at a crucial time in the growing understanding of ozone-layer depletion, traveling to Antarctica to take measurements with a spectrometer that he and his Stony Brook colleagues developed.

His initial research trip there was in 1986; in September 1987, convinced of a human cause of ozone-layer depletion, world leaders finalized the Montreal Protocol, a global agreement that set a timetable for elimination of the harmful chemicals.

In and around Setauket, however, Dr. de Zafra may have been better known for an entirely different role: his work to preserve his area's character and history. He was instrumental in rehabilitating historic buildings, sometimes buying them himself, and in establishing green spaces and fending off excessive development.

"This man was central to the destiny of our community for so many years," Steve Englebright, who represents the area in the New York State Assembly, said in a telephone interview. "He made some enormous contributions to our sense of place."

Robert Lee de Zafra was born on Feb. 15, 1932, in Scarsdale, N.Y., and grew up there and in New Milford, Conn. His father, Carlos, was an engineering professor at New York University, and his mother, Ellen Knox, was a seamstress in a design house.

Dr. de Zafra was a 1954 graduate of Princeton University and received his Ph.D. at the University of Maryland in 1958. He began teaching at Stony Brook in the early 1960s and in 1986 was part of the first National Ozone Expedition to McMurdo Station in Antarctica.

The ozone hole, a seasonal thinning of the ozone layer in the atmosphere over Antarctica that allows harmful ultraviolet rays to reach the Earth's surface, had recently been detected, but whether it was a natural phenomenon or caused by human activity remained under debate.

Dr. de Zafra and other researchers, led by Susan Solomon of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, were able to confirm that chlorofluorocarbons, used in refrigerants and as propellants in aerosol cans, were causing chemical reactions in the atmosphere that depleted ozone.

"Bob and his colleagues were the first to measure chlorine monoxide in the region of the ozone hole over Antarctica in 1986," Dr. Solomon, now at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said in an email. "They showed that this chemical was present in much larger amounts than at other latitudes, and this and subsequent work firmly established that the ozone hole is due to human production of chlorofluorocarbon chemicals.

"These chemicals are now no longer produced anywhere in the world," she added, "and the Antarctic ozone hole is expected to heal slowly over the next 50 years or so. Bob's work was key in helping save the planet's ozone layer."

Louisa Emmons, now a senior scientist at the National Center for Atmospheric Research, was one of Dr. de Zafra's graduate students then and made three trips to McMurdo with him, as well as joining him for field work in Hawaii and Greenland.

"Bob always loved those expeditions as an opportunity to focus on making measurements and figuring out what those observations told us about how the atmosphere worked," Dr. Emmons said by email. He put in long hours, she said, but also liked to explore the exotic locales with students and other colleagues, hiking up the steep Observation Hill next to the McMurdo Station or cross-country skiing out on the ice shelf.

Among the honors and accolades accumulated by Dr. de Zafra over the years was an unusual one: In 1999 — Ms. Atwell thought it might have been a sort of retirement present — a ridge in the Cook Mountains of Antarctica was named after him by the United States Board of Geographic Names.

Dr. de Zafra's first marriage ended in divorce. He is survived by his wife, Julia M. Phillips-Quagliata, whom he married in 1981.

Dr. de Zafra had bought and renovated two historic buildings in Setauket — one was his home — and in recent years had purchased a third, which he was still rehabilitating at his death. He served on various civic boards and was a leader in preserving the history of the Setauket area. The area's claims to fame include being the center of the Culper spy ring, which George Washington deployed against the British and which was the subject of the recently concluded AMC series "Turn."

Mr. Englebright said that just as Dr. de Zafra had helped sound the alarm on ozone depletion, he had also alerted him and many others to preservation issues.

"He was my sentinel on so many community projects," Mr. Englebright said.

Syd Silverman (Memorial Note)

Syd Silverman, longtime publisher and owner of Variety and Daily Variety, died August 27 of a sudden illness. He prepared for Princeton at the Manlius School, majored in Politics, wrote his senior thesis on "Television and Politics", and was Secretary of the Princeton Sports Car Club — an avocation which he pursued passionately for the rest of his life. Even as an undergraduate Syd worked for Variety during the school year and in the summers, traveling to New York on Tuesday nights for press closing and printing. He took over the business in 1957 after service as a Second Lieutenant in the Army. In his three-decade career with the publication, he maintained its reputation as "The Bible of Show Business."

After selling the publications to Cahners Publishing, Syd focused on collecting and driving vintage cars and participating in historic auto racing. He was an owner/investor in the Sportscar Vintage Racing Assn. and developed the successful Vintage Motorsport magazine.

Syd married his first wife, Jan McNally, in June, 1954. Jan died of emphysema in 1997. In 1999 he married Joan Hoffman, whose husband had died two months before Jan. Syd and Jan had four children, who produced eight grandchildren.

Syd Silverman (obituary)

Syd Silverman, longtime publisher and owner of Variety and Daily Variety, who shepherded the entertainment trade papers into the modern era, died August 27 of a sudden illness in Boca Raton, FL. He was 85.

In his three-plus decades at the helm of Variety Inc., he steered the trade publications founded in 1905 by his grandfather Sime Silverman to prosperity, through the revolutions in cable and pay TV, independent film presales, financial interest/syndication rules for TV programs, satellite TV, home video and digital media.

After graduating with a B.A. in Political Science from Princeton in 1954, followed by ROTC service as a 2nd Lieutenant in the Army, he began work in 1957 as publisher and owner of Variety Inc. and its two showbiz trade papers, the New York-based weekly Variety and its daily counterpart in Hollywood. He was known as a fair boss with a keen eye for good reporters with deep industry knowledge who refused to bend to demands of pushy advertisers seeking to influence coverage and allowed Variety journalists to put their personal stamps on stories, which readers found both trustworthy and enlightening. Silverman maintained Variety's unique flavor of unusual language (often referred to as "slanguage" or "Variety-ese") that played to Hollywood's insular nature. Phrases such as "boffo" for hefty movie ticket sales, "ozoner" for drive-in theater and "baloney" for puffery maintained code words for readers that date to the 1920s. Under his leadership, Variety maintained its decades-long reputation as "The Bible of Show Business."

He engineered the sale of the trade publications to Cahners Publishing, a subsidiary of Reed International of the U.K., in 1987. Variety Inc. now is owned by Penske Media Corp., which also owns Deadline.

Although Silverman's business was publishing, his passion was automobile racing. A lifelong enthusiast, his life after the Variety sale focused on collector cars and historic auto racing. He twice was an owner/investor in the Sportscar

Vintage Racing Assn., one of the largest historic racing groups in the U.S., and focused his publishing acumen and considerable resources to develop Vintage Motorsport into the leading magazine in the hobby. He was a noted collector and driver of historic racing cars, especially Lister sports racers and other British marques from the 1950s including Allard, Austin-Healey, Jaguar, AC, Sunbeam and MG.

Silverman was the only child of Sidne Silverman, the second publisher of Variety, and Marie Saxon Silverman. He grew up in Harrison, NY. His mother was a vaudevillian musical-comedy star and accomplished dancer who starred in two Hollywood movies of her era, including The Broadway Hooper for Columbia Pictures. By the time he was 18, both of his parents had died, leaving him as the sole heir to the publications.

He is predeceased by his first wife Jan McNally Silverman of Birmingham, AL, who died in 1997. He is survived by his second wife, Dr. Joan Hoffman of Boca Raton, FL; four children, Marie Silverman Marich of White Plains, NY; Michael Silverman of Scottsdale, AZ; Mark Silverman of New Canaan, CT; and Matthew Silverman of High Falls, NY; and eight grandchildren.

Robert M. Westburg

Robbie died July 12, 2017 at his home in Montana surrounded by his family. Born in Seattle, he attended Exeter. At Princeton he majored in Politics, participated in Crew and joined Charter Club. Robbie held many campus jobs to pay for his education. He was forced to leave at the end of his third year when an alumnus reported to the university that his father had purchased a new Cadillac. His scholarship was withdrawn, and he withdrew. He was accepted that year to the Washington University School of Law where he became the Editor of the law Review. He worked all during his time there to pay his tuition.

Robbie was invited to join Judge F. G. Hamley in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals and became his a clerk in San Francisco. He became a partner in the San Francisco law firm of Pillsbury, Madison and Sutro where he worked for 50 years. He specialized in antitrust law, appellate work and legal ethics. After retiring from his law practice, he volunteered for seven years at the Kalispell Regional Medical Center.

He is survived by his wife of 62 year Nancy and his daughters Catherine, Jennifer and Katherine, seven grandchildren and his brother David. The class extends condolences to them in their loss.

Robert M. Westburg - Obituary

Robert Myers Westberg died July 25th at his home in Montana, surrounded by his loving family. He was 85. A retired lawyer, he and his wife Nancy moved to Montana in 2000 from the San Francisco Bay Area.

Westberg was born in Seattle on July 12, 1932. His father, Alfred J. Westberg, was a lawyer and served as a Senator in the Washington State Legislature. His mother, Jean Myers Westberg, was the daughter of prominent Seattle architect David Myers, who laid out the University of Washington Campus and designed many of its significant buildings.

As a boy, Westberg delivered newspapers by bicycle in the family's hilly Madrona neighborhood. He was an acolyte in the Episcopal Church. He initially attended Garfield High School in Seattle, where he played clarinet in the band alongside classmate Quincy Jones. He worked as a page in the state legislature. He went on to attend the Phillips Exeter Academy in New Hampshire; during the summers, he worked at Sanders Fountain Lunches in Seattle as a fry cook and assistant manager.

After Exeter, Westberg won a scholarship to Princeton University. He waited tables in the student dining hall, was on the Crew team, and joined the Charter Club. Just short of his senior year, his scholarship was withdrawn when a concerned alumnus notified the school that his father had just bought a new Cadillac.

As a result, Westberg returned to Seattle. The University of Washington School of Law was willing to admit him despite his lack of a college degree. By the end of his first year, he was first in his class and became Editor of the Law Review. To pay for school, he worked at the Leckenby Structural Steel Company, spray painting steel girders with lead paint. While at law school, he met Miss Nancy Lyon, an activist and social worker who had been an aide to Tennessee Senator Estes Kefauver in Washington, D.C. The two were married in 1955. He would always characterize his marriage to Nancy as "the best thing I ever did."

When Judge F. G. Hamley was named to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, he invited Westberg to accompany him as clerk to San Francisco. Westberg and his young wife, then expecting their first child, moved to the Bay Area. The Westbergs lived for forty-four years in Marin County - in Sausalito, Mill Valley, Belvedere and Kent Woodlands. They raised three daughters: Britt, Jennifer, and Catherine.

Westberg was a partner in the San Francisco law firm Pillsbury, Madison, and Sutro, where he worked for 50 years. He specialized in anti-trust law, appellate work, and legal ethics. Among his clients were Bethlehem Steel, AT&T, BART, and Chevron. Politically liberal, he was warned as a young associate at the firm that he would be passed over for partnership if he did not resign his membership in the American Civil Liberties Union, which the senior partner at the firm considered to be a Communist organization. Nonetheless, he and Nancy were active in the politics of the day; they canvassed for Democratic candidates, and participated in the anti-war, environmental, and civil rights movements.

In one of Westberg's most significant cases, he represented, pro bono, a group of African American, Hispanic, Asian American, and Pacific Islander firefighters in a successful racial discrimination suit against the San Francisco Fire Department, which at that time had only one African American firefighter. He successfully argued a landmark point on the issue of custody under the Miranda Rule before the Supreme Court of the United States, representing a San Quentin death row inmate.

Robert Myers Westberg was a member of the Bar in Washington State, California, New York State, and the District of Columbia. He was Chairman of the California State Bar Association Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct, President of the San Francisco Legal Aid Society and - for several years - the Mill Valley Library Board.

Westberg had a strongly developed sense of personal integrity and honor. He had a distrust of hiring a tax accountant to prepare his taxes because he thought it was a way to try to get out of paying one's fair share. (Instead he did his own taxes until well into his 70's, using an abacus.) After he retired from practicing law, he volunteered for seven years at the Kalispell Regional Medical Center, delivering mail and newspapers.

Robert Myers Westberg is survived by Nancy, his wife of 62 years, of Kalispell, Montana; daughter Britt La Gatta and son-in-law Louis La Gatta, of Corte Madera; daughter Jennifer Li, of Montana; daughter Catherine Westberg, of Citrus Heights; honorary daughter Diane Kefauver and honorary son Jon Rubin, of San Francisco; grandson Robert La Gatta, of Vallejo; grandson Steven La Gatta, of Vallejo; grandson

Christopher Oberling, of Montana; grandson Harold Oberling, of Montana; granddaughter Alexandra Issacharoff, of Los Angeles; grandson Jacob Issacharoff, of Placerville; grandson Elijah Issacharoff, of Sacramento; brother David Westberg, of Hollywood; and Maizie, a miniature schnauzer

He ran the national student exchange program for many years and was noted for his dedication to his students. He had a great sense of humor and was an avid reader, having read the complete works of Shakespeare and all seven Harry Potter books. His genius was to read something once and never forget it. Mystery was his favorite genre. He volunteered for many local causes, including the Special Olympics which became dear to him. When asked if there was anything he would like to have said about him, he replied, "I tried".

The class is honored by his service to our country and extends its condolences to his family, his wife Kim, son Bob, daughters Linda, Hilary and Meredith and two granddaughters. He considered his family as the center of his universe.

Robert E. Fast, Sr. - Obituary

When Bob Fast passed away in Wilton, Maine, on February 27, 2017, his family thought it might be another one of his false alarms and asked for a second opinion.

Bob was a nerd before being a nerd was cool. He was born in Woodbury, New Jersey, on September 10, 1932, to Fred L. and Helen (Justice) Fast. He was accepted to the University of Chicago when he was 16 but his parents forbade it. He went on to be the class valedictorian at Pitman High School in New Jersey.

Being a gentleman farmer was much more to his liking anyway, so he ran the family's 154 acre peach orchard while in high school, raised Black Angus beef, and sold his tomatoes in Philadelphia to Campbell's. He saved enough money from his farm to build his first house in Woodstown, New Jersey. He also put himself through Princeton University, graduating in 1954. After a brief stint in the Army, he went on to receive his Masters and doctorate degrees from Rutgers University and, in spite of better-paying job offers in New York City, pursued a career in education. He started out as a science teacher at Woodstown High School, became the guidance counselor, and later became the dean of students at Glassboro State College (now Rowan.) A highlight of his tenure at Glassboro was helping with the Johnson-Kosygin talks in 1967.

Bob and his young family, which included Bob Jr. and Linda, moved to Maine in 1967 to be closer to his brother David and their parents, all of whom had the good sense to move to Maine years earlier. He was a psychology professor at the University of Maine at Farmington for 30 years, retiring as Professor Emeritus in 1997. He ran the national student exchange program for many years and was noted for his dedication to his students.

In 1974 he met Kim (Temple) and a 40-year romance ensued. They were married in 1983 and had two children, Hilary and Meredith. Kim, the four children (Robert Jr. and wife Denise; Linda and husband Rob Jodrie; Hilary and husband Doug Mangi; Meredith Fast) and granddaughters Meghan and Sarah Jodrie were the center of his universe and he theirs. He is also survived by his nephew Scott Fast, his wife Cathy and their family.

Bob was a voracious reader, having read the complete works of Shakespeare and all 7 Harry Potter books. He generally didn't read much of anything current, vowing instead to read every book in his grandfather's library during his retirement. Mystery was his favorite genre, and he was also a history buff. He loved a double-malt scotch, an occasional fine cigar, and a seat at the Bridge table. He wore wool socks year round and anyone who made the mistake of commenting got a science lecture on the moisture-absorbing properties of wool. He thought it only right and proper to tuck in his sweatshirts lest he appear slovenly.

Bob was a member of the First Congregational Church in Wilton. He volunteered his time to many local causes including the library and the Wilton Parents Association and became legendary for making Omelettes to order at teacher breakfasts. He was a member of the Wilton Lions Club, where volunteering for the Special Olympics became near and dear to his heart.

He gave new meaning to the phrase, "dance like nobody's watching." His own mother wondered aloud about his two left feet.

He and Kim loved going to the theater together and traveling, most recently to Iceland and Norway, the land of his ancestors. Like any self-respecting Viking, he loved to fish, and his favorite place was Big Gull Lake in Ontario, Canada, where he spent most summers from the time he was 6 years old until the year before he left us. Bob was dubbed an honorary Canadian by his dear friends of Gull Lake.

He had a great sense of humor but was most humorous when he wasn't trying to be. His genius was his ability to read something once and remember it forever. Ironically, he was also the original absent-minded professor, but he was a man of his word and sought to find the good in everyone he knew.

When asked if there was anything he would like to have said about him, he responded simply, "I tried...."

Bob's adoring family would like to thank Dr. Heidi Decker, Dr. Richard Batstone, the devoted team at Androscoggin Hospice, and Dr. Dror Michaelson and Kara Olivieri of Massachusetts General Hospital for maintaining his shelf-life and keeping him well past his expiration date.

Bob loved a good party, and one will be held in his honor at the North Dining Hall on the UMF campus from 6 - 8 p.m. on Friday, March 3rd. Friends and family are all invited to come for refreshments, light banter and the swapping of stories. A toast will be at approximately 7:30 p.m.

In lieu of flowers, you may wish to contribute to the Robert E. Fast Psychology Scholarship set up at UMF in his honor: c/o Development Office, University of Maine at Farmington, 224 Main Street, Farmington, ME 04938

Oh. And be extra nice to a nerd today.

William H. Hudnut III— Obituary (Washington Post)

William H. Hudnut III, a former Indianapolis mayor who was credited with turning the city into a sports capital and revitalizing its downtown after years of decline, died Dec. 18 at a hospice community in Rockville, Md. He was 84. The cause was congestive heart failure, former aide and family spokesman Dave Arland said. Mr. Hudnut had suffered from a heart ailment for several years, he said, and was diagnosed with throat cancer in 2015.

When Mr. Hudnut was first elected its mayor in 1975, Indianapolis was a Rust Belt city that had been hollowed out by white suburban flight and the decline of the manufacturing base. Downtown Indianapolis had become so desolate that men with shotguns hunted pigeons on Sundays among empty buildings and a trash-strewn canal. Novelist and native son Kurt Vonnegut described the city in 1970 as a place where "it was no easy thing to be an optimist" and the passage of time was marked by "the 500-mile speedway race, and then 364 days of miniature golf."

Enter Mr. Hudnut, a Republican and former Presbyterian minister who over the course of 16 years laid the groundwork his successors have built upon, turning Indianapolis into a hub for conventions and sporting events. The longest-serving mayor in the city's history, Mr. Hudnut's popularity was so strong that in 1983 state legislators passed the so-called "Hudnut forever" bill, enabling him and subsequent big-city mayors in Indiana to serve more than two successive terms in office.

Indianapolis's downtown now boasts hotels, restaurants, theaters, a three-mile canal walk and boutique apartments. A modern convention center and stadiums for professional football and basketball have been built. Construction cranes hover above the city.

"The vision I have for Indianapolis is a city that is both economically competitive and compassionate toward urban and human problems," Mr. Hudnut said during his final term in office. "To make the city more livable involves more than just creating beautiful spaces and buildings. It's more than a solid economic foundation and more than good jobs. It's embracing future change. It's dealing with tough human issues that touch the compassionate side in all of us."

Mr. Hudnut spearheaded construction of the Hoosier Dome football stadium in 1982 with no guarantees that a National Football League team would locate there. By the time the stadium was completed in 1984, he had persuaded the Baltimore Colts to make it their new home, shocking Maryland politicians and fans who felt betrayed by the Colts' middle-of-the-night move out of Charm City. Mr. Hudnut also created the Indiana Sports Corp., a city commission that has brought Indianapolis sporting events that included the 1982 National Sports Festival, a competition for U.S. Olympic hopefuls; the 1987 Pan American Games; and the 1991 World Gymnastics Championships.

In 2015, Mr. Hudnut was one of several former mayors who penned a public letter amid uproar over a religious objections law signed by Indiana Gov. Mike Pence (R), now the vice president-elect. The law created a legal defense for business owners and employees with religious objections to serving or accommodating gay people. Mr. Hudnut and the other mayors said the law threatened to undo efforts made since 1967 to "build an inclusive, caring and hospitable city." Pence and lawmakers later approved changes to the law.

David Frick, a deputy mayor under Mr. Hudnut, told the Indianapolis Business Journal that the mayor was inclusive and a "consensus builder" and wasn't afraid to sit down with Democrats and labor unions.

"History will judge him for what he did in bringing the community together to tackle the revitalization of downtown," said Frick, who was deputy mayor in the late 1970s.

"Politicians these days tend to retreat to their core supporters. He was always looking for input from different parts of the community."

William Herbert Hudnut III was born in Cincinnati on Oct. 17, 1932. His father and grandfather were Presbyterian ministers. After graduating in 1954 from Princeton University — where his classmates included future secretary of defense Donald H. Rumsfeld and senator Paul Sarbanes of Maryland — Mr. Hudnut studied at Union Theological Seminary in New York and preached in Annapolis and Buffalo. He moved to Indianapolis in 1963 to preach at Second Presbyterian Church. He entered politics a decade later, winning a term in Congress in 1972 but losing his bid for reelection.

He "got the itch" for public office, Mr. Hudnut told Indianapolis Monthly this year, when he chaired a committee of ministers supporting then-Mayor Richard Lugar and "was beguiled by the roar of the crowd, the stemwinder speeches, the bunting in red, white and blue."

After his final term as mayor, which lasted until the end of 1991, Mr. Hudnut relocated to Chicago and then to suburban Maryland. He was a former president of the National League of Cities and was senior fellow emeritus at the Urban Land Institute.

Mr. Hudnut had lived in the Washington area since the 1990s and finished his political career with a stint as mayor of Chevy Chase, Md., from 2004 to 2006. The Washington Post reported that some neighbors, after learning of his experience in Indianapolis, successfully urged him to run for Chevy Chase's Town Council in 2000. The position of mayor rotates among the council's five members. "It's a public service," Mr. Hudnut told The Post in 2004, six months into his tenure as mayor. "I try to help out where I'm located."

His marriages to Anne Goodyear and Susan Greer ended in divorce. Survivors include his wife of 27 years, Beverly Guidara, who was his former press secretary, and four children.

William H. Hudnut III - Valediction Forbidding Mourning

One cannot choose how one finishes the race, only how one runs it. I would not have chosen a long, slow slide into complete heart failure, but I tried to cope with it with "gaiety, courage and a quiet mind," to borrow from my mother who in turn was quoting Robert Louis Stevenson.

It has often been remarked that life is a journey, not a destination. About the destination, "I believe, Lord, help thou mine unbelief." I leave this earthly life at peace, with faith and trust in a future that will carry me beyond the bourne of space and time, but also with wariness of plotting the furniture of heaven or the temperature of hell. There is much I cannot fathom about the afterlife. Will there be recognition? What part of me, if any, survives? Forever, or just until I am forgotten? A little reverent agnosticism seems to be in order, because "now we see through a glass darkly." More positively, "we walk by faith and not by sight."

About the journey, it's been a wonderful trip. As I have said many times, I hope my epitaph will read: "He built well and he cared about people."

I have tried to lead a useful life. Of course, I've made mistakes. I've displayed some real shortcomings and caused some hurts along the way. I'm sorry. But overall, I look back with gratitude. I have been blessed in so many ways—by my loving wife Beverly for more than a quarter century; by my chances to move from a one-room schoolhouse in the cornfields of Illinois to graduate school in New York City; by living in America, and spending most of my professional career in Indianapolis; by having a beautiful cottage in the serenity of the Adirondack mountains; by manifold opportunities to lead a life of service and usefulness, as mayor, congressman, Presbyterian clergyman, academic, think tank fellow; and by the people in my life like doctors, staff, academics, co-workers, (certain!) media types, political allies (and adversaries!), church members, fellow citizens who have worked with me and wished me well across the years. There's no such thing as a self-made man or woman. We're all indebted to others, a point I always tried to make whenever some thoughtful recognition like Hudnut Commons would come my way.

In my last years, I have become deeply aware of the love from family and friends and well-wishers with which I have been surrounded. Starting with my wife Beverly, I think about my children, grandchildren and great grandchildren. Also, I think about my cousins (ranging from 90 down to infancy), my parents and siblings and other relatives in our family circle. I cherish the affection and support of friends too numerous to count. I have appreciated the posts on the CaringBridge website expressing appreciation, encouragement, and loving concern. I can't be sure, but it seems as though great love must endure. I depart this life believing with St. Paul (I Cor. 13): "Love can outlast anything; it still stands when all else has fallen."

As Cardinal John Henry Newman wrote, "O Lord, support us all the day long, till the shadows lengthen, and the evening comes, and the busy world is hushed, and the fever of life is over, and our work is done, and then in Thy great mercy, grant us a safe lodging, a holy rest, and peace at the last. Amen."

Richard C. Bull — Memorial Note

Dick Bull died November 15, 2016 after a fall that led to a brief illness in Santa Rosa, CA. Born in St. Louis, he graduated from the St. Louis Country Day School. An English major at Princeton, he was a member of Tiger Inn. A talented linguist, he spoke German, Russian Polish and French. After graduation, Dick enlisted in the U.S. Army. He served in Counter Intelligence and was stationed in Berlin. He ultimately entered the Central intelligence Agency where he served for thirty-one years with postings in Vienna, Dahomey (Benin), Libya, Belgium, the United Kingdom and Washington, D.C. In 1958, he married Katherine Stark and she joined the CIA to become one of its early female field officers.

When the Berlin Wall came down in 1989, he wept for joy seeing countless East Germans reunited, a goal he and his wife had worked toward for twenty-eight years.

Dick also spent two years as the liaison between the CIA and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, capping a career that had taken him across an era and several continents. He had a deep and abiding interest in people. An avid ski enthusiast and a lover of jazz, he also had an endless passion for golden retrievers.

The class is honored by his lifelong service to our country and extends its condolences to his wife Katherine, son Winston, two grandchildren and friends and family too numerous to mention.

Richard C. Bull - Obituary

Richard Clark Bull died November 15, 2016 after a brief illness in Santa Rosa, CA. He was eighty-four. He loved Katherine, his wife of 58 years, his family, and his endless procession of golden retrievers. He could not pass a dog on the sidewalk without stopping to pet it. He was an extrovert whose charm lit up the room. He enjoyed a good joke. In earlier days, he was a proficient skier and a lover of jazz.

Mr. Bull was born in St. Louis, MO. He attended St. Louis Country Day School before going on to Princeton University (class of '54). While there he was an enthusiastic member of Tiger Inn eating club. He maintained close friendships with classmates all of his life; they will sorely miss him. A talented linguist, Mr. Bull spoke German, Polish, Russian and French. In high school he worked a summer in a margarine factory in Hamburg, furthering his interest in international affairs and post-war Europe.

In 1955 he enlisted in the Army and served in the Counter-Intelligence Corps, again returning to Germany, this time to Berlin. Amid martini parties and questionably-requisitioned Jeeps, he did important and exciting work and became hooked on a life of Intelligence. He ultimately entered the Central Intelligence Agency where he served for thirty-one years with postings in Vienna, Dahomey (Benin), Libya, Belgium, the United Kingdom and Washington, D.C.

In 1958 he married Katherine Stark, youngest daughter of Lloyd C. Stark, governor of Missouri. She joined the CIA as one of its early female field officers and enjoyed a lengthy career there. They had one child, and together they travelled the world. As a father Mr. Bull was tireless in showing his son the wonders of the world and its people. He had a deep and abiding interest in people. While in Vienna Mr. Bull learned to ski, and he cultivated that love in his son. Every year for almost thirty years the two of them would go on an annual ski trip, seeing some of the most beautiful places on earth. On one trip Mr. Bull broke both thumbs: he was seen the very next day on the slopes, both arms in slings, gingerly skiing down the slopes of the Matterhorn, two white casts swinging.

When the Berlin Wall came down in 1989, Dick Bull wept for joy at the sight of countless liberated East Germans reuniting with West German friends and family, a goal he and his wife had worked towards for twenty-eight years.

Two subsequent years as the liaison between the CIA and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence capped a career that had taken Mr. Bull across an era and several continents. In 1991 he retired to divide his time between Washington, D.C. and to build a beloved house in the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia, nestled in Harris Hollow, where he could watch successive golden retrievers run after deer and bear and rake leaves to his heart's content, or ache, whichever came first.

In 2011, he and Katherine followed their son and grandchildren to California.

He leaves behind many who loved him beyond words--his wife of 58 years, Katherine; a sister, Katherine; his son Winston and daughter-in-law Deborah; two grandchildren; friends and family too numerous to mention.
