TRAILERING TIP

On the road, we notice a lot of folks use a padlock instead of a standard pin to secure the trailer coupler. We trailer more than the average bears, and we have yet to see someone steal a moving trailer. Plus, who wants to de-ice a lock every time you unhitch? We suggest using the standard pin while hauling and locking up while you're parked. Using the pin provides an easy way to keep your electrical connector out of the snow and ice as well!

standing inside, and driving sleds on and off the ramp only requires a slight bend of the neck to get in and out.

The LowRider Hybrid TC trailers are geared for transport. You might fit a few more accessories in there, but it's not necessarily meant to be a trailer for wrenching in. If you're looking for something simple, stylish, and at the top end of functionality, the LowRider Hybrid TC trailers from Triton are worth a look. Cost varies on length and options. MORE INFO: www.tritontrailers.com

KickAss Wipes

If there's one garage item we would recommend to any snowmobiler (or anyone who owns a garage or trailer) it's these KickAss Work Wipes. Anytime you find yourself with dirt, grease and grime on your hands, tools or sled, these should be your new "go-to."

Axle grease, spray paint, injection oil, adhesives ... you name it – there is not a substance we haven't tried to get off with these. Plus, they are great on nearly any surface. We've used these wipes on our hands, work benches, sled plastic, trailers and more. KickAss wipes are a fabric wipe with a rough side for scrubbing, but their unique composition won't scratch the surfaces. As mentioned, we've used these wipes to scrub down sled hoods and other smooth surfaces without leaving a scratch. The smooth side is perfect for even the manliest man's delicate hands, and it keeps them from cracking, unlike pumice soaps.

These are waterless wipes, so they don't leave streaks or residue behind. KickAss wipes just get the job done, and that's why we keep them in our truck, trailer and garage.

Wipes are available in 20-count canisters ($5.95) or 400-count buckets ($64.95). MORE INFO: www.kickasswipes.com
