Parish Profile

The Parish of Auchterderran Kinglassie is made up of two small neighbouring villages approximately 2 miles apart.

Although there is a church building in both villages the congregation became a Union in September, 2013.

Due to the retiral of our minister, the nominating committee of Auchterderran Kinglassie Parish Church is looking to call a minister of deep faith, who has vision and drive and is capable of inspiring and leading our friendly, supportive congregation.

The congregation is strong and loyal, looking with hope to their future direction.

The following profile has been prepared to provide information for candidates.

Cardenden

Cardenden is a village of approximately 5800 inhabitants. It is made up of four smaller communities: Auchterderran, Bowhill, Cardenden, and Dundonald - known locally as ABCD. The village was once at the centre of the coal industry in Fife, with Bowhill Colliery, Lady Helen Colliery and many smaller pits. All of which are now closed.

Kinglassie

The village of Kinglassie has a population of approximately 1800 inhabitants. It was also a mining community and the majority of housing was built for mining.

Housing now, in both villages, is a mixture of privately owned and socially rented properties, with plans for further development in the future.

Education

There are three interdenominational primary schools and one Roman Catholic primary school in the villages. Secondary pupils go to High Schools in Lochgelly or Glenrothes. Fife College in Kirkcaldy, Dunfermline and Glenrothes offer a wide variety of higher educational courses, both academic and vocational.

Recreation Facilities

The villages have excellent recreational facilities:

- 🏠 1 church hall (built 2009)
- 🏠 5 community halls
- 🏊 1 swimming pool
- 🏏 2 bowling greens
- ⛳ 1 nine hole golf course
- ⚽ football pitches
- 📖 2 libraries

Leisure

There is a good community spirit in the villages, with well supported events. Several organised groups meet in the communities for various activities e.g walking, keep-fit, photography, youth clubs, dancing.

There are scenic rural walks and cycle tracks in local woodlands and nearby: around Loch Leven, the Lomonds and the Ochil Hills.

Transport

Cardenden and Kinglassie are within easy commuting distance of Edinburgh, Dundee and Perth.

There is a small station with regular train services to these cities, as well as excellent bus services and park & ride facilities. The nearby towns of Kirkcaldy, Glenrothes and Dunfermline are also readily accessible by bus.

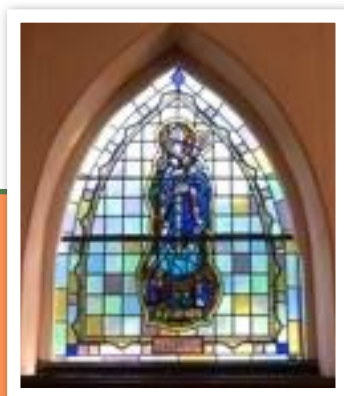

Auchterderran

Auchterderran, which is a listed building, rests on a site which has had religious significance since the early 7th century. Once used as a resting place by the monks from Loch Leven on their road to the shores of the River Forth.

The original building of 1059 has disappeared, but the Kinninmonth family crypt at the rear was the original chancel. The present building was built in a T-shape in 1798, and enlarged in 1890. In 1931 the window from the 1059 chancel was placed into an extension to the north of the church and now displays two beautiful windows.

On the closure of St Fothad's Church, the St Fothad's Window was removed and is now placed within the Auchterderran building

Kinglassie

The Kinglassie building is L-shaped, built of stone, and is just over 230 years old. It was renovated in 1773. The west wing was funded by Mr Mitchell in 1890 and another 124 seats were added and opened in February 1891.

This addition was acknowledged by a circular stained glass window in the gable of the transept. There has been a church on the site since the early 12th century.

Manse

The Church Manse is situated opposite the Church in Cardenden. Originally built in the 1970s, the ground floor comprises a large hall, toilet, kitchen, study, large lounge and dining room. Upstairs there are 4 spacious bedrooms, family bathroom and ample cupboard space. All windows are double glazed.

We have struggled for some time with the fact that the Manse stood in large grounds, which have proved difficult to maintain, and when the Church went into vacancy, it was decided to take the opportunity to carry out extensive refurbishment to the property. Further, the overgrown grounds have been cleared, creating two building plots which will largely finance the upgrading of the Manse.

This work is currently ongoing. The home has been rewired throughout, with a new central heating system installed. Loft insulation and cavity wall insulation will be completed. A new bathroom and kitchen will be installed, and all rooms decorated to a high standard. Externally the roof and the roughcasting will be replaced (this work starts in May 2016), a new, separate garage is to be built, and a new entrance and drive will be installed for the property.
