FEATHERS IN THE WIND

I have recently discovered that I can't eat national brand ice cream without being sick within a day or two. and now wonder if I was being smart even trying the ice cream in Tiffin.

When we stopped in Tiffin I saw this little girl in a bright pink bathing suit with a ruffled skirt. Does that remind any of you of the swimsuits we had?

She was licking a vanilla cone which made her look like a poster girl for summer.

She already had a little bit of tan. I wondered if she would go into a wading pool soon. It also made me remember those horrid bathing caps we all seemed to have to wear to go swimming back in the "old days."

I have a larger than average size head so no matter what we bought I would have a terrible ache around the edges of my head.

To make things worse my mother had been told that if one stuffed tissues around the edge of the cap one's hair would not get wet.

AMANA NEWS AND NOTES

Pay it Forward: Amana Food Pantry Featured in TV segment

With more than 30 households regularly returning to the Amana Church Food Pantry every month and an estimated 80 people receiving food from the pantry, a cooperative effort born of a desire to help has been a success.

Last weekend Fox 28 Channel 2 news did a "Pay it Forward" segment at the Amana Church featuring the work of about a dozen volunteers, the Amana Church and the local residents and local businesses who support the mission. The segment aired Sunday evening and early Monday morning.

If you missed the show, go to this link for a replay. <http://cbs2iowa.com/community/pay-it-forward/pay-it-forward-volunteers-feed-iowa-county-through-amana-food-pantry>.

The committee with Annie Trumpold, Charlotte and Gary Heishmann, Kristie Yoder, Elaine Brown and Andrea Haldy works in cooperation with HACAAP to manage and stock the pantry. Cash and food donations are received from church members, local businesses and HACAAP. In particular several area gardeners and the Amana Meat Shop have been particularly supportive, the committee notes. So addition to canned goods, the pantry gives out milk, bread, fresh meat and vegetables.

This is a free food pantry and the service is completely confidential. The pantry is open two days a month: Every third Wednesday from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. and every last Sunday from 11 a.m. until noon.

THE SANDLOT

The season has ended and it was definitely on a high note. The 11U team went to the EIHC tournament in Williamsburg June 30th and played the best games of the season. Even though it was a scorcher and they went one for three in games, the games lost were by only one run and were hard fought! They came together as a team, hit the ball well, and played pretty solid defense. Most importantly, they had a ton of fun!

Thanks again for all the donations and support this season! You are helping to not only create ball-players but develop useful life skills these boys can take with them outside of baseball. A special thank you to The Amana Meatshop for donating hamburgers for our grill out and pool party after the tournament Saturday!

See you next year! The Sandlot Coaches and Players

Those were the days of hair spray (lots of it) and “bee hair styles, or the ever famous “French roll.”

Naturally you didn’t want to get out of the pool with one’s hair dripping wet and having to re-do it all over again once you got home and had rinsed all the chlorine out of your hair.

You were also convinced that your hair would turn green because of the chlorine.

I had my bathing cap “stuffed” with tissues which gave me one heck of headache.

One time I even went off the diving board and did not come back up. I was slowly rising to the top when my instructor dove in and “rescued” me. Not only was I humiliated, but I was convinced that all those tissues had weighted me down.

My sister and a couple of friends took private lessons, but most of the kids took those lessons that began early in the morning.

My friend, Donna, was one of them. She had goose bumps even before she got on the bus to go to the pool in Marengo.

That pool was awful because it was so COLD. The pipe that recycled the water must have had ice cubes in it because most everyone either slowly got into the pool or just gritted their teeth and dove right in.

They didn’t exactly “dive in” since the sides were slopped and the deepest part was in the middle of the pool, but one did whatever one could to get over that first terrible chill of the water.

Somehow, we seemed to survive and now look at those “children” who came after us and had a new pool in Middle with disdain. They have no idea what we endured!

The only good thing about the old pool in Marengo (they have since built a new one) was that after the lessons were over with one could go to the snack bar and get some of the “exotic candy” they including the chocolate item that one had to lick and lick because it was hard and you could not bite it off.

I think the snack bar must have made a small fortune because we were always told not to until after an hour had gone by before we swam.

DAYLILIES TO BLUEGRASS

Gardeners and music lovers take note. On July 14, at our new daylily festival in our South Amana Cottage-in-the-Meadow Gardens, 500 different daylily varieties will meet bluegrass for the first time. But it won’t be bluegrass from the lawn that surrounds them. It will be banjos, guitars, bass fiddles, and voices.

Larry Rettig, co-owner with his wife, Wilma, will give a morning daylily hybridization demonstration and class and will provide an afternoon tour of the entire gardens. Cottage-in-the-Meadow Gardens is listed with the Smithsonian in its Archive of American Gardens. It has been featured in national and regional magazines, on the Internet, and in local and regional newspapers..

Free daylily plants available while the supply last. One batch in the morning, another in the afternoon.

The afternoon events will include a two-hour bluegrass concert, bring your lawn chairs.

Schedule

10:00 Gardens open
10:30-11:30 Daylily hybridization demo and class
1:00-3:00 Banjoist Bob Black and friends
3:00-4:00 Tour of entire gardens, daylilies included
