Evening Program on April 2nd to Highlight Decorative Arts

On Thursday, April 2nd at 7:00 p.m., on the 3rd Floor of Sparrell School, the Norwell Historical Society will sponsor a lecture and demonstration of patterns and artifacts of Early American Decoration. Astrid Donnellan, a prominent artist and restorer, will speak about Norwell’s Maryjane Clark collection—currently housed in the Historical Society archives.

Mrs. Clark was a master craftsperson who had a studio in Norwell called Scrabble Arts. She was a researcher in Early American Decoration and specialized in tin, wood, furniture and other painted and stenciled media. She worked with a like-minded group of artisan researchers for over 60 years.

Mrs. Donnellen is also a master craftsperson and lecturer, and one of Maryjane Clark’s students. Refreshments will be available that evening, and admission is free for everyone. There is no need to pre-register for this event, but if you have any questions please contact Gail Storm at 781-659-7852.
Mass Memories Project A Success! ... But So Much More Still To Be Collected

Written by William Slattery, NHS Archivist

On Saturday, February 14, many citizens of town appeared before video cameras and scanning machines at the Norwell Public Library because they wished to preserve family stories for posterity. The pictures they brought served as a starting point for reminiscing about past personal or family events they experienced in Massachusetts and Norwell.

This activity, entitled Mass Memories Project, is made possible through the assistance of many people and organizations: participating college students, the Massachusetts State Archives, the Norwell Public Library, the Norwell Council on Aging, and the Norwell Historical Society. Similar groups in towns and cities throughout the state are joining together in the effort to build a stronger sense of “community”. (There is a rumor that Mass Memories Project coordinators were so impressed by the turnout in Norwell that they may be making another stop here in the not-too-distant future!) So, those who might like to share some memories and photographs should seriously consider making a little preparation. The results of this project will not only be available to the state but also to the Norwell Public Library.

As time goes by, our family photographs, not always appreciated by members of the next generation, often get lost or tossed out in the anxious rush to settle a deceased relative’s estate. It is sad that so many of our residents will have nothing but an obituary notice and a tombstone to recall their passing.

The Town of Norwell, particularly the School Department, has graciously allowed the Society space for an archives area in which to collect and preserve such pictures, documents, and a few artifacts. In this electronic age, pictures may be scanned and the originals returned to their owners. The Norwell Historical Society has members willing to catalog and preserve originals as well as scan and return them. The donor or lender should try to identify as much as they know about the picture(s) submitted. They may be brought to the Community Room of the Middle School during the Society’s library hours where they may be left under lock and key to the care of our archival staff. If you so instruct us, we may be able to share them with Mass Memories on their return trip should you be unable to attend that session.

When the Society had its library in the Town Center in 1988-90, I remember a man from out of town related to the Nash family who was thrilled to find the Society had a cataloged album of photographs with captions.

Did You Know?

...the answer to the last issue’s Trivia Corner Question? The question was: When was the first power boat reportedly seen on the North River and who owned it?

The answer is: About 1894 the first power boat appeared on the North River. It was owned by Henry D. Smith of River Street and it was 26-feet long and it had a naptha engine for power. and even a genealogy of the Nash family that had lived in Norwell for many generations. He was a relative who deeply cared about his ancestors and wanted to know about them. I remember he also gave us a rather generous donation which greatly surprised President Jeanne Garside and me. While I cannot promise that some day in the future a relative of yours will be joyful to find out about you and other members of your current family, I’d say that it was worth the try to make this happen! Why shouldn’t someone in the future be able to come to Town and discover your presence here? Now is the time to take a few steps to make sure you and those you love are never forgotten in the bigger story of Norwell. Everybody makes up the larger fabric of the Town’s history—even if we only came here to hang our hats after a hard day’s work somewhere else.

In the 1990s, Mr. Marchione, a history teacher at the junior high school, gave his classes the task of recording oral histories from citizens throughout the Town. The Historical Society has a large set of both tapes and transcriptions from this worthy assignment. Sadly, with the today’s educational demands, teachers simply cannot afford the time at the secondary level to continue in Mr. Marchione’s footsteps. Yet another reason why your input would be so helpful.

While the Society can use volunteers to cut out current newspaper articles about Norwell personalities and events, even this task may be hampered in the future as more people turn from newspapers to electronic methods of gathering information. Even letters are not available to historians much any more due to e-mails and text-messaging.

To preserve local history in the future will take more effort on everyone’s part. Please help the Society to preserve what we can for the education of future generations. We’re hoping to hear from you soon.
OF NOTE...
The Norwell Historical Society's esteemed president for many years, Bob Norris, has decided to step down in Fall, 2009. Who can replace Bob? No one. Who will replace Bob? Perhaps you.

Norwell Historical Society Publications and Memorabilia
