There was an party at Hurst Ranch last Saturday celebrating West Covina's Centennial. It was a competing event with the big bash held by the city at the Sportsplex last week. A non profit organization in the city hosted their 75th Anniversary. Both events were well attended, sold out, actually. The city event was focused more on the city's history, and the non profit focused on the work they do.

My wife and I attended both parties, and last week I posted several photos of the city event. Here are a few photos from the other one.

Tickets were $75 a head and we were met at the door with champagne. The band was really good, and lots of dignitaries were there who skipped the city's party the week before.

We recognized many nice folks, with lots of haters there as well. The program was long and boring and our food was stone cold. I noticed that several tables had 8 persons seated at them, but they crammed 10 place settings at our table; it was crowded & uncomfortable.

We were seated far to one side which was a dig on my wife Rosario Diaz, the Mayor of West Covina. This didn't surprise me much, since the host and founder of the non profit (Colleen Rozatti) was defeated by my wife in the last City Council election. In fact, had Rozatti prevailed in that election, she would have been Mayor herself that night instead of my wife. Ouch.

Rozatti came over and greeted someone seated at our table, and rubbed her ample backside against my jacket as she squeezed by, lacking in basic courtesy as she snubbed my wife, who she invited. You could tell that Rozatti is still very bitter over her landslide defeat, and I had a good laugh over that, it never gets old.

I never expected her to rise to the occasion and be gracious. There were some really beautiful people there, most were dressed to the 9's; but not Rozatti.

She looked like a female version of the Michelin Man, wrapped in a dingy dish towel, long in the tooth, tired & weary. Judge for yourself.

Good morning.

After reading through your post, I debated if I should reply. As a middle school teacher I work tirelessly to teach my students about respect; not only seeking it but giving it. While I understand we are all entitled to our opinions and... See more
