"Facing the Challenge: Preparing for the Future"

This year's theme is "Facing The Challenge: Preparing For The Future" will focus on how staying grounded in uncertain times and how we can prevail as WE stand together to continue the fight for workers' rights and social justice.

This event is our opportunity to spotlight outstanding contributions of community activists, elected officials and labor leaders who, following Mr. Randolph's legacy, have made strides toward sustaining freedom, social equality and worker's rights. Human rights activists and supporters from across the state will come together to celebrate the legacy of A. Philip Randolph.

North Carolina Supreme Court Justice, Anita Earls will be the keynote speaker. Formally a lawyer with Southern Coalition for Social Justice, Justice Anita Earls fought to protect human and civil rights. She believes that no challenge is too great to face. Her continuous commitment to bettering the community has undoubtedly changed lives for the better.

This year, North Carolina A. Philip Randolph Institute will be honoring both Carrie Clark, Executive Director of North Carolina League of Conversation Voters, with the Community Leader Award, and Andre Barnett, Secretary-Treasurer of United Food and Commercial Worker Local 1208 with the Labor Leader Award. Their continuous contributions and leadership to the local, state and national community and strides toward sustaining freedom, social equality and worker's rights follow the legacy of Mr. Randolph.

Proceeds from this event will support voter engagement, voter education, get-out the-vote (G.O.T.V.) strategies and community service programs such as closing the health disparity gap in our community, environmental justice and feeding the hungry initiatives. The North Carolina A. Philip Randolph Institute is a non-partisan, nonprofit 501 (c)(3) organization. Our officers, board of directors, and members are committed to increasing volunteerism.

The North Carolina State Affiliate solicits your support through sponsorship in the Asa Philip Randolph Souvenir Journal and enjoying an evening of celebration and dining.

There is no room block. However, you can make reservations at 919.383.8575.

APRI's mission from our founding to the present has been to fight for racial equality and economic justice for minorities, the poor and working people. North Carolina A. Philip Randolph Institute, Inc. and local chapters across the state appreciate your participation and support with our annual event to help us achieve our mission.

In Solidarity,
Mary K. Montford
President/Board Chair NCAPRI
