

Healing Under Fire Team

Gabriella Arcadu PhD, is Italian and currently lives in Trieste.

She is a political scientist with expertise in conflict affected, transitional/fragile states.

She has 20 years of experience in institutional strengthening/capacity building and governance programmes. Over the years she has designed and implemented transformational training and capacity building programmes in S.E. and Central Asia, Africa, Middle East and the Balkans.

Since the late 1990s she has been involved in the Health as a Bridge to Peace programme of the WHO, implementing actions in Sri Lanka, Indonesia and Egypt and assisting in the development of an HBP training package. In 2005 she assisted in the drafting of the Health and DDR section of the Integrated Disarmament Demobilization and Reintegration Standards later adopted by the UN.

In 2010 she has drafted for the WHO a global policy for civil-military coordination in the health sector carrying out field research in Afghanistan. She has worked in different capacity for UN agencies, Universities and NGOs developing projects for various donors.

In 2013 she is among the founding members of the Rugiagli Initiative a network of professionals focused on enhancing the capacity for peace amongst health professionals working in conflict areas.

She is currently the director of 4change, a non-profit association that carries out training and research activities in conflict-prone/fragile which she co-funded in 2009.