About the County

Whatcom County is located in the U.S. state of Washington. As of the 2010 census, the population was 201,140. On the shores of Bellingham Bay with Mount Baker as its backdrop, Bellingham is the last major city before the Washington coastline meets the Canadian border. The City of Bellingham, which serves as the county seat of Whatcom County, is at the center of a uniquely picturesque area offering a rich variety of recreational, cultural, educational and economic activities.

Area residents are passionate about community life. Strategic investments in parks, trails and preserved open spaces offer recreation and respite, and help the community grow gracefully as the population increases. Numerous public/private partnerships support the burgeoning arts and cultural district of downtown Bellingham and elsewhere. With over 130 miles of shoreline from Semiahmoo and Blaine Harbor, down to Larrabee State Park, our active waterfront hosts a range of recreation opportunities along with a number of commercial marine activities. Significant change is on the horizon as area community leaders and residents consider options for redevelopment of Bellingham's waterfront, and a deep water port at Cherry Point.

In South Bellingham, the historic Fairhaven District is a quaint, charming community full of boutiques, shops, spas and restaurants. Lynden is the second largest city in Whatcom County. Named and established in 1874, the town began as a pioneer settlement headed by Holden and Phoebe Judson and is today home to one of the largest Dutch American communities in the nation, as well as the Northwest Washington Fair. The architecture pays homage to its heritage with locations made over in a Dutch theme, complete with windmills and tulips.
