Pattern of the Month: Mayfair “Open Rose”

By Bonnie Theard

If you are looking for a pattern that offers one of the largest number of items to collect, and the most variety in serving pieces, Mayfair “Open Rose” by Hocking Glass Co. is ideal. The pattern was produced for seven years (1931 to 1936) and features a prominent rose design.

More than 60 different items were made in this pattern. Included are numerous bowls (9 styles), celery dishes (3), goblets (7), tumblers (8), sherbets (3), plates (9), pitchers (3), plus platters, relish dishes, two styles of cups, cream soups, and much more.

The pattern was produced in pink, blue, green, and yellow, although pink is the only color in which you can find all the pieces. For example, there are no goblets in blue and yellow, and fewer tumblers in green and yellow. Pink is the more commonly found color, also the lightest in hue. Blue and green are bolder, and although many pieces come in yellow, very few are seen even in reference books.

Among the priciest pieces are some of the goblets, the sugar lid in any color, flat salt and pepper shakers, flat 4.75-inch water tumblers, round cups (as opposed to the square standard shape), the two larger pitchers, and the console bowl with three legs.

Notable pieces are the decanter with stopper (made only in pink), sandwich server with center handle, grill plates, 12-inch scalloped fruit “hat” bowl, round 6.5-inch sherbet plate with center indent, and large 11.75-inch shallow bowl.

Be careful, some of the pieces in this pattern have been reproduced, mainly the cookie jar with lid, shakers, the whiskey tumbler, and the 3.5-inch juice tumbler.

Color differences as well as colors not originally produced are easy to spot.

Photos from top: celery dish 10-inch, not divided, and 7-inch covered vegetable that also doubles as a butter dish with cover; sandwich servers with center handles in bright green and soft pink; candy jar and cover with creamer and sugar; and decanter with stopper (made only in pink) and two 6.5-inch iced tea tumblers.

Pictured above: 8.5-inch and 6-inch pitchers; oval vegetable with open handles, cup and saucer and sherbet; divided relish and two cream soups; and cookie jar with lid.
