

Mosher Brief Bio:

Dr. Loray D. Mosher has 20 years' experience expanding across both education and industry. She is noted for her advocacy in supporting women in analytical career fields. Loray is well published and her work has been presented at both educational and business conferences domestically and internationally. She has been noted to have a special connection with her audience and an authentic, yet humorous, approach to problem solving in today's challenging business environment.

Mosher Expanded Professional Bio:

Dr. Loray Mosher is a Research Professor and Assistant Director of the Supply Chain Management Research Center Sam M. Walton College of Business at the University of Arkansas. The University's unique demographic position enables Loray to connect research and students to industry effectively using her skill set in business processes and educational leadership as a platform.

Loray began her career in the education system spending time as a High School Counselor, a Vice Principal in a Los Angeles Unified School District, and as an Adjunct Professor in the Teacher Credentialing Program at the University of Redlands in Southern California where she also received her degrees. Her 20 year investment in public education and administration allowed her to pursue her passion for developing youth through guidance and creating superior programs.

As a small business owner and Executive Director of the Global Education Foundation, Loray's past business experience allows her to operate effectively with current business practices in larger markets, as well as bringing her experience into the classroom for her students. Her work with Women Impacting Supply Excellence (WISE) at the University is well known. She is a true scholar practitioner.

Loray holds a Ph.D. in Educational Leadership with emphasis on social justice, a Masters Degree in Educational Counseling, a Tier II Administrative Credential along with undergraduate work in clinical counseling and the psychology of human behavior.

Loray is a member of the Council of Supply Chain Management Professionals (CSCMP), the Retail Logistics Association (RILA), the Network of Executive Women (NEW), and an active Board Member of Logistics Quarterly Magazine which features several of Loray's articles related to support for women entering analytical career fields.

Loray's work has been presented at both educational and business conferences domestically and internationally. She has been noted to have a special connection with her audience and an authentic, yet humorous, approach to problem solving in today's challenging business environment.

She is thankful to be here with you today to share her vision and raise awareness of the advantages of supporting women's potential.