

Mrs. Wright

(reference: International Association of Teamwork Facilitators website)

Once upon a time, Mrs. Wright took her three left-handed children: Wendy Wright, Larry Wright, and Billy Wright to summer camp. They left on a Monday and planned to return just before the 4th of July holiday. Larry Wright left school 2 days early (for the right reason, of course!) to make the long drive to camp. Wendy left her packing until the very end and had leftover items that would not fit in her trunk the right way. With about 100 miles left to go, Billy discovered that he left behind all the addresses of friends that he wanted to write to while at camp. Unfortunately, his friends would be left in the dark while he was away. Mrs. Wright decided the right thing to do was to return home right away so that Billy could retrieve his address book. Later at camp, Billy was able to redeem himself because he won the “Little Lefty” award for his remarkable left-handed catch in left field. That left no doubt that the three Wright children would be back at camp next summer!
