HEALTH ACTION INFORMATION NETWORK (HAIN)

Since its establishment in 1985, the mission of Health Action Information Network (HAIN) is to provide and advocate for the use of objective and timely information on health issues that would contribute to community transformation.

HAIN started as an information and research center of community-based health programs (CBHPs) in the Philippines. Through the years, HAIN's work has expanded to include training and education activities for a wide range of participants including health professionals, reproductive health advocates, health science students, women's groups, LGBTs, and media practitioners throughout the country.

With 25 years of conducting training-workshops, HAIN has developed the expertise and gained credibility to enhance the capabilities of its target participants through its Training Academy. Under this program, it aims to equip and harness knowledge and skills of participants for strategic communication and information approaches.

HAIN TRAINING ACADEMY

The Training Academy was formed to serve as a learning hub for developing new methodologies and strategies, and in utilizing technology for simplified teaching of different health issues in the community. HAIN conducts training programs to enhance capacity development for advocacy, research and training that would hone leaders to become valuable health educators and advocates.

Training workshops for grassroots and communities are similarly conducted to impart to the people the knowledge, attitudes and skills that are necessary in improving the people's health.This provides the opportunity for HAIN to propagate its framework in health education which places emphasis on a holistic primary health care approach where socio-economic and political factors are regarded as highly important to attain quality state of health.

Health Action Information Network

UNDERSTANDING STI and HIV and AIDS

A Basic Training Course

Health Action Information Network

UNDERSTANDING STI, HIV & AIDS

Rationale

It has been almost three decades from the time HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus) infection and AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) have created great alarm in the Philippines. Despite great efforts to prevent its transmission through education, the number of cases continues to grow and this time, younger people are the ones most affected. This will significantly affect the workforce of the country, increase the number of orphans, infect and affect women, and the health care system will be greatly burdened.

Comprehensive education on STI (Sexually Transmitted Infection), HIV and AIDS particularly among young people is yet to be institutionalized. Great responsibility lies in each one of us. STI, HIV and AIDS are not just medical concerns. They play a complex and significant impact on sexuality, moral and ethical issues, stigma and discrimination, relationships and healthy lifestyles.

Understanding STI, HIV and AIDS rather than inculcating fear towards PLHIV (Person Living with HIV) is the only key to prevention. HAIN believes that each one of us should be equipped with objective, accurate and timely information to appropriately respond to STI, HIV and AIDS. Choose life, fight AIDS.

Description

This training covers both biomedical and psychosocial dimensions of STI, HIV and AIDS. It also features socio-historical and economic implication of the current national and global situation, modes of transmission, how to prevent transmission, and how to access treatment, care and support.
