

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Research for this book was greatly assisted by a Pre-doctoral Fellowship, a summer dissertation fellowship, and a graduate student research grant from the Horace H. Rackham School of Graduate Studies of The University of Michigan; by a grant from the College Center of the Finger Lakes; and by various forms of assistance from Elmira College.

I am obliged to the staffs of numerous libraries for their time, generous spirit, and patience in checking manuscript collections for me, servicing my endless requests, and sending me copies of relevant materials. Several fellow scholars, principally David Burner and Paula Eldot, similarly aided me. I should also thank those who permitted me to examine restricted manuscript collections and oral history memoirs.

I am especially grateful to the chairman of my dissertation committee, Sidney Fine, for his patience, invaluable criticisms, and advice. I also wish to thank the other members of the committee, Joseph E. Kallenbach, Shaw Livermore, Jr., and Robert M. Warner, for their assistance and advice.

My parents, to whom this book is dedicated, provided me steady encouragement, as did the Emmerts and many friends and colleagues. David and Peter helped, first by releasing their father to go off to work on his “pages,” and later in other ways. As for Peggy, she already knows just how much I owe to her. Our marriage survived my pressing her into service from time to time as a research assistant – as well as her pointed criticisms of my writing. She tolerated my pursuit of that last piece of evidence, or that final rewrite, before coming home. All three sacrificed me on more evenings, weekends, and holidays than I care to recall.

Of course, any errors and omissions are mine alone, but whatever strengths this book possesses reflect the contributions of all these persons. To all of you, I commend Ecclesiastes 12:12 for its pithy summary of the scholar’s lot.
