■ Sabal Palm Bank has announced that Tish Scott-Murphy has joined the team at the

Tish Scott-Murphy

735 East Venice Avenue, Venice location as Vice President and Business Development Officer. She will be working out of both the Venice and Sarasota offices to bring in new business and service existing clients.

Tish brings almost 39 years of banking experience with her, 23 of those years in community banking. She has spent the last ten years as manager of all retail banking at In-signia Bank in Sarasota where she focused on the customer-service side of community banking.

Tish has been a Venice resident for almost 40 years where she raised three children and is happily enjoying her role as grandma to her five grandchildren. She has been involved with the Laurel Civic Association for over 20 years and is currently serving as the Board Chair. She has been an active member of both the Sarasota and Venice Chambers of Commerce serving on multiple committees.

■ Sharon Roush will be the founding president of Sarasota Memorial Health Care System

Sharon Roush

(SMH)'s new south county hospital and 65-acre medical campus on Laurel Road.

Roush stepped into the new executive role in July to oversee the design, construction and opening of Sarasota Memorial Hospital – Laurel Road, and its ongoing operations. A resident of Sarasota, Roush comes from South Bay Hospital in Sun City, Fla., where she served as CEO of the 138-bed community hospital in HCA Healthcare's West Florida Division for nearly 10 years. Before that, she served as CEO for two other HCA hospitals in Florida: Capital Regional Medical Center in Tallahassee and Columbia Hospital in West Palm Beach.

Over the course of her 25-year career, Roush led the development and design of one of HCA's largest building projects – the replacement hospital, Capital Regional Medical Center – and expanded multiple service lines in the communities she served. The Laurel Road hospital will be the most significant addition in Sarasota Memorial's 93-year history. Future plans also include a new community hospital in North Port.

Florida's Agency for Health Care Administration granted preliminary approval of SMH's Certificate of Need application in 2016, but the project was delayed after surrounding hospitals challenged the state's decision. A judge affirmed AHCA's decision in May. The state is expected to issue a final order in the coming weeks.

It will take about three years to build the new hospital, which will have 90 acute-care beds, 20 beds for observation patients and an Emergency Care Center with 25 treatment rooms. Services include emergency care, medical, surgical and intensive care units, surgical suites, including a dedicated operating room for obstetrical procedures or medically necessary C-sections; cardiac catheterization/interventional services; endoscopy suite; respiratory services; infusion/chemotherapy services; rehabilitation services, radiology/imaging services; a laboratory and pharmacy, among other clinical services.

The campus will offer all private rooms, advanced hurricane hardening and a seamless connection to SMH's electronic medical records and information technology. It also will offer a full complement of outpatient services.

■ Victoria Kasdan, RN, MPH was recently selected to be a member of The Influencer Project, a high-profile, statewide initiative launched in May 2018 by the Miami Herald, El Nuevo Herald and McClatchy to fuel an in-depth discussion about key issues driving voters' decisions in the 2018 election cycle. The project's aim is to draw on the expertise and leadership of Florida's diverse voices (in business, non-profit, entertainment, sports, faith and culture) to elevate the election-year conversation and keep candidates focused on the policy positions that matter to Floridians.

Kasdan joins a diverse group of 50 people throughout Florida as selected, leaders who understand what matters to key constituencies across the state. From June through November, members of The Influencer Project will provide feedback focused on critical policy issues of importance to Floridians. Their participation will culminate at an event in November.

The group was divided into four categories – visionaries, educators, advocates and experts. Articles representing member's perspectives will be printed regularly over the next few months in The Miami Herald with links to The Bradenton Herald.

Kasdan, a registered nurse for more than 30 years, holds a Master of Public Health degree, and is an experienced leader in the medical and health insurance fields.

She currently serves as Executive Director of We Care Manatee, a local nonprofit that facilitates delivery of free medical care for low-income, uninsured residents in coordination with a team of 80 volunteer licensed providers.
