

COLOUR HOLOGRAMS for Sale

Colour holograms

Since 1993 I have been developing colour holography and today that's the only type of holograms I am working on. The full colour Denisyuk reflection holograms are as close as we can come to an ultra-realistic imaging technique. It is now possible to record what we call "OptoClones" of artefacts with high quality and good colour rendition. Finally, museums have been interested to actually using this technique and do no longer regard holograms as a gimmick, but a new, useful imaging technique superior to any other known imaging technology.

Here you will find some of my early colour holograms. These were recorded on Slavich PFG-O3c plates which were very good in the 1990s. These holograms here are the ones I used as demonstrations of colour holography. Of course, I only selected the very best ones for this purpose. Some of these historic colour holograms are for sale. I also have a few colour holograms in my collection recorded by other holographers. Most of the holograms are sealed and framed, but some of them you only get the recorded plate.

The Flag (1995) by Anaït Stephens

Inverted Denisyuk colour silver-halide hologram on glass
THE TEST PLATE IS NOT SIGNED; Plate size: 8" x 10" (20 x 25 cm) unframed £600.-

This is a test plate which is good, but it is not signed by the artist. A pseudoscopic colour sculpture of the flag, with the stars falling off the flag, was created by Anaït. This art piece for the hologram was recorded using three (RGB) lasers on a Russian Slavich panchromatic PFG-03c silver-halide emulsion. During the recording, the emulsion side of the plate was facing the reference beam and not the object. When the hologram plate is flipped-around when on display, the image appears in front of the plate with a large field of view.

The signed FLAG hologram is for sale in the list of the Art Holograms.

Eye of the Golden Dragon Collector Watch (2001) £190.-

The Eye of the Golden Dragon Collector Watch from Franklin Mint. The watch was designed by Michael Whelan, it features a glass eye set into the lid and a holographic face depicting one of Whelan's dragons. The clock in its stand is shown here and the detail of the photopolymer colour hologram by DAI Nippon in Japan.

This was probably the first product with a colour hologram

The Eye of the Golden Dragon Collector Watch and Display

- Fantasy master Michael Whelan creates his first collector watch!
- Lifelike 3-D hologram.
- A piercing golden eye is surrounded by spectacular fantasy sculpture.
- Dramatic 24 karat gold and sterling silver flourishes on the lid!
- Precision quartz movement.
- Complete with a sensational custom-designed display stand.

A stirring expression of power, mythology and mastery over time can be yours! Michael Whelan's first collector watch sits in a magnificent sculptured dragon display...a golden monster that watches over your most precious commodity: time! There's nothing in your current collection that can match the unique drama of The Eye of the Golden Dragon Collector Watch and Display. 24 karat gold accents and sterling silver flourishes on the lid, fierce mythical monsters and a three-dimensional color hologram that seems to jump off the watch face, make a breathtaking combination. And it's yours at a fraction of the cost of what you'd expect to pay for such a spectacular work of art. Order now and proudly display The Eye of the Golden Dragon -- with Michael Whelan's mark and the minted medal of Franklin Mint Collector Watches -- in your home or office.
